TAKEN BACK TO JAIL FOR A SANITY TEST.

HIS MOTHER AND SISTER TESTIFY

The sight of his aged and feeble mother recalling his youthful frailties on the witness stand in the East Cambridge Court in an effort to save him from the electric chair so worked upon the feelings of Chester S. Jordan to-day that tears streamed from his eyes.

Following the testimony of Mr. Jordan, her daughter, Mrs. Nettie E. Livermore, the wife of Jesse L. Livermore of New York, was called. She said that she had seen Chester when a boy run straight into a gate in daylight. He would not fight his own fights, she said, and did not play like other boys.

At noon to-day Jordan was taken to the prison so that an examination might be made of him by the alienists for the defence. The experts who took part in the examination were Dr. George F. Jelly of Boston, Dr. Frank W. Paige of the McLean Hospital and Dr. William McDonald of Providence, R. I.

None of the alienists for the prosecution was present. Just before the afternoon session opened District Attorney Higgins said:

"The defence has not yet given us permission to examine Jordan as to his sanity."

Mrs. Livermore said that Chester was formerly in the money loaning business in Boston, in connection with his brother-in-law, Fred C. Kendall. She furnished the capital.

Mrs. Kendall said Chester spent part of the time at her house and played pool with her father and brother.

Ithineas G. Jordan, the father of Chester, took the stand for a few minutes and told in serious illness Chester once had.

George A. Mills of Indianapolis testified that he had seen Jordan in the throes of epileptic fit in the street.

When Jordan's mother was on the stand District Attorney Higgins tried to get her to admit that when Chester pounded his head on the floor as a boy he simply had what is usually called a "tantrum." She said he had acted that way because she would not give him something he wanted.

The trial drew an immense crowd to-day. In the courtroom the women pressed to the front. They divided their attention about equally between Jordan and his sisters when they were on the stand. The two sisters are handsome women, both bearing a strong resemblance to their brother on trial.

Mrs. Belle Orr of Indianapolis testified that her husband, who was a cousin of Jordan, tried to kill her and afterwards hanged himself. He had tried suicide before by cutting his throat.

Clash Between Counsel.

Mrs. Livermore was called to the witness stand shortly before 10 o'clock. She was halted at the door while the District Attorney addressed the court, saying:

"May it please Your Honor, before the next witness is placed upon the witness

DRAPER TALKS TO COTTON MEN

With addresses by Governor Eben S. Draper, Albert A. Clarke and Dr. George F. Bowin, the annual meeting of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers opened to-day in Mechanics building, Huntington avenue. Three hundred delegates were present. The session will close late this afternoon after the election of officers.

A feature of the meeting was the awarding of the association medal to James B. McCabe, a former member, for services rendered in establishing friendly relations with international manufacturers and for large contributions to the cotton trade.

Governor Draper, escorted to the platform by President Charles T. Plunkett, was roundly applauded and said in part:

"I wish to say that the Massachusetts industries in common are of tremendous importance. At the present day the cotton industries are well off, but there are in a peculiar condition. They are in the shadow of a pending tariff law. We hope it will be a good one; but in one that will be a full protection to the manufacturing industries of this country. I expect that when this tariff bill is passed the conditions through the whole country will be better.

"But there is one thing of great importance. Our exports of cotton goods to the Far East have decreased rapidly. Why? Because we have a great competitor in the manufacture of cotton goods. I refer to Japan. She gets her material and her wages as cheap as we do, but she gets up at one-quarter of what it costs us. It is a serious question for the cotton manufacturers to consider."

C. Q. D. CALL BY THE GIANTS AGAINST DOVES

POLO GROUNDS, New York, April 28.—After eating so much humble pie the Giants were a bedraggled looking tribe to le the Doves in the final game in to- s diamond scrap.

The Doves riddled McGraw's gang with terrible lacing yesterday, but they came) smiling, looking for more trouble and ceased sure to get it before Mike Bowerman would say sufficient, for the old gladiator, imbued with the winning virus, couldn't see where any team had a chance with his league leaders.

Another slam from the Doves was about the last straw in the cup of sorrow for the Manhattanites and McGraw was in a desperate mood when the battle began.

With the distress signal waving the scrappy leader was forced to seek out his star utsider, Christie Mathewson, and hustle him to rescue his crew from complete annihilation.

GOV. WILLSON IS HUNG IN EFFIGY

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 28.—Governor Willson was hung in effigy at Ghent, in Carroll county, this week. He was made of straw, swung in the public square many days. There was a card attached to the effigy which read as follows: "Gus Willson, friend of the American Tobacco Company, infamous Governor who pardoned guilty and bloody assassins."

"Bill Taylor is dead, but his friends ain't. Let Taylor come back and we will fix him."

DARING TALK ON DRESS WINS SPEAKER WIFE

NEW YORK, April 28.—The girl who made himself famous by declaring that American women were immoral because they wore too many clothes is about to be married. His fiancee heard him propound his theories and fell in love with him. He looked at her and reciprocated. Now the wedding day is set for June 5th.

The man is Arthur George Pomeroy Colden, treasurer. The girl whom he has chosen for a wife is Miss Helene Bancroft, granddaughter of George Bancroft, the historian, and daughter of Samuel Putnam Bancroft.

Mr. Colden, who is the son of Lieutenant-General Sir Edward Colden, arrived in this city a few weeks ago and has been giving a series of lectures on Africa and morality at the League of Political Education in Berkeley Lyceum.

It was there that he met Miss Bancroft who had come from Massachusetts to attend the lectures.

The eyes of Mr. Colden fell on Miss Bancroft as she sat on attentive listener and his ideal of womanhood rose before him fulfilled. They met after the lecture and the romance began right there in the lecture room. Miss Bancroft was radiant at the home of friends in New Rochelle to-day and confirmed the report of her engagement to Mr. Colden quite frankly.

"I hope to go to Africa and see these charming heiles," she said.

"You I think and honeymoon will be spent in the South's forest where the dwarfs are. It will be very jolly and dangerous. Mr. Colden has told me all about them. I am most anxious to go to the mountains of the Moon in the District of Tori lately visited by the Duke of the Abruzzi."

Mrs. Livermore may called to the witness stand shortly before 10 o'clock. She was halted at the door while the District Attorney addressed the court, saying:

"May it please Your Honor, before the next witness is placed upon the witness

WANTS INCOME TAX IN CONSTITUTION

WASHINGTON, April 28.—When the Senate resumed debate on the tariff bill Senator Brown spoke in support of his proposed amendment to the constitution enabling the United States to levy income and inheritance taxes. There was a doubt, he said, in the minds of the framers of the constitution as to the meaning of the words "direct taxes"; that doubt still existed, and it should be removed by a specific grant of authority in the fundamental law.

BURBANK HOSPITAL TRUSTEE RESIGNS

FITCHBURG, April 28.—Elliott N. Choate, who has been secretary of the board of trustees and executive committee of Burbank Hospital eighteen years, will resign his position if someone else can be secured to take it. It is said his action is in no way influenced by the recent investigation into the methods at the hospital.

FINES FOR OLEOMARGARINE

LYNN, April 28.—Seven restaurant keepers were in court to-day, charged by agents of the State Dairy Bureau with serving oleomargarine without the law to their customers. Mary Sheehan, Emma H. Whitney, Catherine Regan and Annie M. Vaule were each fined $10. Charles Montfort, Emma Stacey and Grace H. Hitchcock had their cases continued to May 3.

LYNN WEDDING TO-NIGHT.

LYNN, April 28.—Miss Mildred A. Richards, daughter of Alfred A. Richards, and Dr. Frank Leroy Maguire of Worcester will be married this evening by Rev. Donald Gorrish at the bride's home, No. 50 Irving avenue. After a honeymoon on the bride's orange plantation in Florida, the couple will live in Worcester.

REPORT 100 MISSIONARIES MASSACRED

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 28.—Official dispatches were received to-day from Adana, confirming the report that another massacre is in progress there.

It is reported that a church containing 100 Protestant missionaries was burned and all within perished.

The reports say that the missionaries who perished at Hadjin in the burning church went to their doom like martyrs. As the flames burned away the walls of the structure the missionaries within sang hymns and prayed that the murderers might be forgiven their sins.

The massacre is not confined merely to Adana, but has spread to surrounding villages. Residents are fleeing for their lives and the furies of Moslems. Through the early hours of to-day the massacres were accompanied by incendiary fires and looting.

Streets Filled with Dead.

It was at Hadjin that the church wherein the missionaries had gathered from neighboring villages was reported to have been destroyed. The foreign representatives here are attempting to ascertain the truth of the report now.

It was first thought that the lives of foreigners were not in danger, as the fanatics seemed to direct their attacks against the Armenians. Men, women and children were cut down in cold blood and streets were filled with dead bodies.

The fanatics, insane with their bloody work, beat down the doors of houses which had been barricaded against them and entering slashed the inmates to death with their scimitars.

Either resistance or non-resistance meant death. The torch was applied indiscriminately, and the smoke from hundreds of burning homes hung like a pall over the city. Parents carrying their children and attempting to seek a place of safety outside the city were chopped down by the bloodthirsty Moslems. Babes were dashed to death. The sickening scenes were kept up through the day and many who had protected themselves in the darkness were found and put to the sword.

Women Appeal for Help.

A telegram was received to-day from Miss Rose Lambert, one of the besieged American women missionaries at Hadjin. It sets forth the danger surrounding Miss Lambert and her companions, who are quite alone and courageous:

"Hadjin is almost entirely without food, and animals in the city are dying of starvation. The provincial authorities have been appealed to, both orally and in writing, to send more troops to Hadjin, but all to no without result. The messenger who first started with this dispatch to the local telegraph office was killed on his way."

The American women at Hadjin are Miss Virginia A. Hilling, of Kirkland, O.; Miss Caroline E. Bleiter of Chicago; Miss Lambert, who is a daughter of Bishop Lambert, and a Miss Babcock.

For eleven days the town has been threatened by fanatical Mohammedan Turkish men, whose camps completely encircle it.

The American Board of Foreign Missions, with offices on Beacon street, also recalls the report of the massacre in the church as told above, declaring that there are not 100 Protestant missionaries in the entire district referred to.

WHITNEY WINS BRITISH HANDICAP

NEWMARKET, Eng., April 28.—H. P. Whitney's sixty 11 won the Heath high weight handicap to-day.

American horses ran first and second in the one-and-four-furlong dash for a two-year-old selling race and a purse of 300 guineas. Charles Carroll's Miss Ellen won in the hardest kind of a drive from August Belmont's Burgman.

RED SOX AND YANKEES IN THE RUBBER

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, April 28.—Big doings were on the card for the fans who assembled at the Huntington avenue grounds this afternoon for with one victory each the Highlanders and the Red Sox met for the third time. Boston was dumped out of the first division by the defeat they sustained at the hands of the invaders from the Big Town and were out for to-day's great vengeance in this afternoon's struggle. Manager Lake was anxious to get this game to his credit for a loss meant a drop below the .500 mark in the percentage column. The Highlanders at the start of to-day battle rested just 27 points below the Tigers and Stallings meant to make it less than that.

Elberfeld was in the game at third base for the visitors apparently not suffering a bit from the injuries he received in yesterday's contest.

The bright sunshine of the morning dried out the field in fine style and although the ground was nasty for sliding to bases and was rather soggy, the men got around in lively manner. On account of the two-o'clock games these days having played in the last two days, the fans swarmed to the field to witness the third encounter.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., April 28.—Little Miss Mathilda McCormick, six years old, is possibly telling of a ride up the Warm Springs Mountains in the arms and on the shoulders of John D. Rockefeller, who will be seventy years old on July 8. The small miss is the oil king's granddaughter, child of the one-time fifth Rockefeller and Harold F. McCormick of Chicago. Mr. Rockefeller took his grandchild out for her first canter in mountain climbing. The youngster finally surrendered to fatigue, whereupon the venerable man of many millions bore her for two miles up the steepest section of the climb.

HOLD BOSTON SUSPECTS IN WHITLA CASE

The Boston police are to-day holding two men arrested on suspicion of being connected with the kidnapping of Willie Whitla of Pennsylvania for the Sharon (Pa.) police. They are believed to be the ringleaders in a gang here which has tried to blackmail money from Attorney Whitla, the eight-year-old boy's father.

The authorities here to-day notified the police of Sharon, Pa., where the Whitlas live.

Local detectives are looking up the records of the men and have called in the government officials to help them.

The men under arrest claim to be Arthur W. Wright, living at the Hotel Stead, a lodging house in Bliss street, and Ernest H. Martin of No. 1 Templeton way, Dorchester. Both are shabby and without funds.

On April 23 a letter was mailed from Dorchester postoffice to Mr. Whitla at Sharon which read:

Dear Sir—Our society not having received the money for the return of the boy, voted to send four men that had charge of all arrangements on getting boy in the first place, to take him away again in the night.

This may mean death to the boy. So it was voted to give you a chance to pay the money. The Black Hand on receiving the same will not trouble you. We are not interested in the Boyles. They were just tools for our men. Send $1,000 in $50 bills, $9,000 in $1,000 bills, and send the coin in three lots.

Have it here by Monday morning and no tricks, or it will go hard with your boy when he is taken. We will send a man of steel for the letters.

Send the money to Arthur Howard Brown, Post Station H, Boston, Mass.

As soon as he got the letter Mr. Whitla notified the Sharon police. They told him to mail a decoy letter at once, and then they telegraphed the Boston police. Special officers William J. Irwin and Robert A. Stewart were detailed to watch the general delivery at Station H. They found Mr. Whitla's letter for Arthur Howard Browne there waiting for him when he called, but all day Monday and until 8 p. m. yesterday none called. They were about ready to give up when Wright appeared. He slouched in, looked around and glanced at a torn newspaper he carried.

"Anything for Browne? Arthur Howard Brown?" he asked. The clerk passed out the letter and Browne was arrested.

As they passed by a doorway a moment later the officers noticed Wright, they say, give a significant glance at another shabby individual there. He was arrested and gave the name of Martin.

On the newspaper which Wright carried was written in red ink, "Say you are Arthur Howard Brown and ask for what's coming to you."

"DARK HORSES" IN THE WORLD RACE CONTEST

"Dark horses" have sprung up in the great Race Around the World Contest since the announcement of the special prizes of $100 in gold.

Of all sides candidates are coming forward with subscriptions that lift them high above the places they had held in the list, or there are new ones coming in with piles that place them at once prominently in the list of voters.

Every one is working now to win either one of the tours around the world or one of the tours to Europe, but the special incentive is one of those twelve gold prizes.

"What have you done this week in the great vacation tour contest? How many votes have you had credited to you?" These questions are heard on all sides now—on the streets, in the schools and in places of business.

The questions are not alone confined to children, but older persons have a great direct interest in the competition because of the privilege allowed the winners of naming their own escorts. Teachers, parents and friends of various candidates meet and discuss the progress of the race, and since the indorsement of the race by Governor Draper, the question is freely discussed in the State House, where various forces are engaged in trying to find a suitable State House candidate.

While subscriptions form the best way of piling up a large total, voting coupons are printed daily on Page 2 of the BOSTON AMERICAN, and these are being freely clipped. Don't forget there is a time limit on these votes. Get subscriptions.

HALF MILLION FACTORY FIRE AT PEABODY

The plant of the A. B. Clark Morocco Manufacturing Company at Peabody was destroyed by fire early today. The loss is now estimated at $250,000, although earlier estimated by the factory superintendent at $500,000.

Six tenement houses and a shoe-finding plant were badly damaged. The fire threatened the entire town. Help was summoned from Beverly, Salem and other places.

Scores of men, women and children fled from their homes when the flames leaped across Union street and set fire to a row of big tenement buildings.

The heroes of the fire were Charles Hunt and Daniel Cotter, employes of the National Calfskin Company, whose plant of seventeen wooden buildings was threatened.

The fire was the worst in the history of the town. In as far distant places as Salem and Lynn newspapers could be read distinctly in the street. The blaze lighted up the sky for miles around.

Over 500 employes of the Clark Company have been thrown out of work as the result of the fire, which comes at a time when the plant was being rushed with orders.

The fire was discovered shortly after 3 o'clock by John Tivanan, watchman for the National Calfskin Company. He sent in an alarm from the company's private box.

Then he dashed into the burning building, and with Daniel O'Brien, night watchman for the Clark Company, opened the big fire hose and patent sprinklers on each floor of the building.

While the fire was at its height Cotter and Hunt dashed through a wall of flame and smoke and gained entrance to the big boiler room, around which the fire was burning with intense fury. The men made their way to the big fire pipe and started the pumps going.

Then they dragged a line of hose to one of the windows which had been broken by the flames and through which seething tongues were already leaping, and directed the stream into the very heart of the fire.

Firemen who had seen the two men dash into the building believed that they were facing death in the volcano of flame.

Several attempted to dash through the flames to the rescue, but were driven back.

It was not until 6 o'clock that the firemen could make their way to the side of Cotter and his companion. They found the two men, wild-eyed and disheveled, their faces and hands burned, their clothing partly consumed by the fire, directing the stream through the open window into the heart of the blaze.

BAD CONTRACT? IT'S FINE, SAYS MAYOR HIBBARD

Neither Mayor George A. Hibbard nor his superintendent of streets, Guy C. Emerson, seemed at all disturbed to-day by the widespread protest against the lighting contract signed by Mayor Hibbard yesterday, giving a five-year contract involving a total of $1,800,000 to the Edison Electric Lighting Company.

The Merchants' Association, the Central Labor Union and many men prominent in civic affairs had demanded a postponement until an expert commission might investigate the whole matter. These requests the Mayor ignored.

Mayor Hibbard said to-day when asked if he cared to reply to his critics:

"I consider the contract which I approved yesterday a good one for the city of Boston. The Boston Merchants' Association assisted in securing the latest concession. I was influenced largely by the investigation made by Superintendent Emerson of the department of streets, and I believe there is not in all the city an expert as competent to judge the terms of this contract as he.

Where Emerson Was Ignored.

"One of the chief objections was against the continued use of the Gilbert arc lamps. The 500 which will ultimately remain will do so by courtesy of the company.

"It is generally conceded that the magnetite lamp is vastly superior to the other.

President James J. Storrow of the Merchants' Association is in New York. He said over the long distance telephone today that he heard just before taking the train yesterday at Boston that Mayor Hibbard had signed the bill.

"But I didn't have time to get a final draft of the contract and don't want to say anything until I see what he actually signed," he said. "Of course, I am very much interested, in view of the request we made to have the matter probed more deeply."

BOY WIRELESS EXPERTS SEE JACK BINNS

More than 100 boys of Greater Boston, owners and operators of wireless telegraph outfits at their homes, last night attended the performance of "When Knighthood Was in Flower" at the Boston Theatre, through the invitation of the BOSTON AMERICAN, and afterward met Jack Binns, the hero of the steamer Republic disaster. Binns cheerfully answered all their questions and enlightened them on the details concerning the installation and operating of wireless instruments.

Last week the BOSTON AMERICAN extended an invitation to all boy amateur wireless operators in Boston and vicinity to witness the performances of the first wireless telegraph home. The applicants' ages ranged from eight years upward, and as more than proved that they had delved deeply into the study of wireless.

The climax came in the third act, showing the wireless operating room on a storm-tossed steamer, with the heavy rolling of the Dunbar and the blinding flashes of lightning. In this scene is shown a fully equipped, powerful wireless telegraph outfit, the exact duplicate of the one used by the Republic and in charge of Jack Binns. At that time the boys smiled every move of the operator as he rattled off the dots and dashes.

After the show Jack Binns met the boys personally in the Mason street foyer of the theatre, and for fully half an hour was kept busy answering the rapid-fire questions showered on him. Some of the questions showed that the boys possessed knowledge of the subject far "over their head."

PET DOG SAVES MASTER'S LIFE

LYNN, April 28.—Herbert I. Patten, of No. 7 Clinton street, probably owes his life to the barking of his pet dog, Don. At 5:45 this morning he awoke to find Don barking loudly and tugging at the clothes of his bed. The house was filled with dense smoke, and Patten escaped to the street with difficulty. Patten was alone in the house at the time, his wife and two children having spent last night in Everett.

The fire started in the ashes about a defective chimney on the first floor and did $1,500 damage to the house and $800 damage to the furnishings. Patten had to break open his way down, almost stifled by the smoke. The dog remained at his heels till he reached the street.

OLD SULTAN A PRISONER TILL DEATH

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 28. – Abdul Hamid's fate is sealed. The deposed Sultan will be kept a prisoner for life, probably in Cheragan Palace. This step was decided upon at a secret meeting of the National Assembly.

The situation at Erzeroum and Aleppo, where the soldiers of the Fourth and Fifth Army Corps mutinied yesterday, is very grave to-day. The need of immediate action to prevent the sweeping of Asia Minor by a terrible civil war was to-day placed before the new Sultan, and he has promised to send a large army into Asia Minor at once.

The reactionaries in Western Macedonia are also in a state of insurrection, and in Northern Albania the opponents of the Young Turks are continuing their revolt. The Liberals are in the minority and are suffering great loss of life.

Removed During Night.

The report circulated last night, and generally credited, that Abdul Hamid had been found dead in the Yildiz palace, is accounted for to-day. When the deputation from the national assembly went to the palace they found the monarch on the floor, in a fit of an assumed ill, and the word went forth that he was dead. The palace was searched unsuccessfully for a long time. It became necessary at last to force an entrance to the harem, and there the monarch was found in the floor in a swoon.

He was quickly placed in a closed carriage and driven rapidly to the Dolmabagtch palace, a beautiful building near by, on the very edge of the Bosphorus, where the elder brother, the Sultan Murad V, who was also deposed, was incarcerated for over twenty years.

Pleads Piteously for Life.

"Why am I overthrown? Why am I deposed?" he cried, when he had recovered consciousness. "Why do you thus misuse me? For thirty years I have done nothing but good. I have taken care of my brother Mehmed, as any other Sultan would have killed. Tell me why you desire my death."

The officials did not answer.

Then Abdul spoke again, crying:

"Let me live! Do not kill me! I'll do what you wish!"

The Sultan's captors did not answer this piteous appeal.

"Take me to my palace at Teheragan, together with my family. There I was born, and there I wish to end my days!"

Constantinople is in a state of fear to-day. Mehmed V., the new Sultan, has already turned his attention to bringing order out of chaos which has existed in Constantinople for months. He has dedicated his future policy, which will be broad and marked by progressive liberties never before enjoyed by the people.

Selecting New Cabinet.

Ahmed Reza has already been named Grand Vizier, and to-day was set at the task of forming a new cabinet. The following are the prospective appointees:

Minister of the Interior, Helmi Pasha; Minister of Public Instruction, Hiseli Djahi; Minister of Finance, Djevid Bey; Minister of Foreign Affairs, Rifaa Pasha; Minister of Mines and Forests, Vitfan Bey; Minister of Public Works, Mouzaf Oumg.

Hadji Arif Pasha was eliminated from the Sultan's Cabinet as Premier after the thirty revolt of April 13.

The streets of the city to-day are bright with flags, and the noise of the fetes takes the place of the musket fire and the rattle of shrapnel guns.

Abdul Hamid is said to be in the greatest fear of his life, and repeatedly seeks assurance that he will not be put to death. On the trip to Salonika his pleas for his life almost excited the contempt of his keepers, they were so abject.

MURIEL WHITE, BRIDE IN PARIS OF A NOBLEMAN

MISS WHITE WEDS COUNT OF GERMANY

PARIS, April 28.—Miss Muriel White, daughter of Henry White, American ambassador to France, became the bride of Countess of the German empire when the civil ceremony uniting her to Count Hermann Ecker-Rizen Dobrau, Prussian Silesia, was performed by the mayor of the eighth arondissement.

The service was perfunctory in its nuptury, simple in compliance with the French law, none but the families and a few of the most intimate friends of the contracting parties witnessing the rite.

Ambassador and Mrs. White attended their daughter, and with them were the Countess Montsoulain, an aunt of the bride; Miss Anna M. Zborowski of New York, for whom she married, Mrs. Orville H. White's nieces, Miss Margaret Rutherford, a daughter of Mrs. W. K. Rutherford, and Miss Lucy Buckler, daughter of William H. Buckler, secretary of the American Embassy at Madrid, also were present.

After the ceremony the party was driven to the American Embassy, where preparations for temporary religious consumation of the wedding in St. Joseph's Church are under way.

The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a cadeleon sapphire and diamond bracelet with a ring to match. Count and Countess Hoyer-Thiess gave her a bride's diamond crescent, table silverware, a piano and furniture. Ambassador White gave his son a motor car and Mr. White gave their daughter a diamond tiara and earrings, a dinner service and a dressing case.

Other gifts were from Mr. and Mrs. Levi P. Morton, the Duchess of Marlborough, Mrs. Reid and Mrs. Reid, Lord Curzon, Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Lord Dalkeith, Joseph Choate, Prince and Princess Rudolin, Countess Appony, Lord Cromer and Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills.

HILL PREDICTS BIG WHEAT CROP

NEW YORK, April 28.—Every farmer in the Northwest is plowing for a bumper crop of wheat this year," said James J. Hill, who has just returned from a tour of a large part of the wheat belt penetrated by the Great Northern Railroad.

Wall street heard his declaration with interest. Two months ago Mr. Hill, in an exclusive interview with the AMERICAN, forecasted the crisis that would occur in the wheat market. At that time he pointed out the unusually high ranges of price of grain.

He says that the developed wheat belt of the Northwest does not yield much more than half of the standard of production set when the soil was virgin. He thinks, however, the acreage now being planted will so far exceed that of last year that the total yield will approximate the production of a few years ago and thus help substantially to relieve the hard conditions threatened by the Patten corner.

Jefferson M. Levy, director of the Canadian Pacific railroad, said reports he has received from the officials of that railroad indicate that the wheat acreage of the Canadian Northwest this year will be thirty per cent. ahead of last year.

"A great tide of immigration has been sweeping up into that territory for months," said Mr. Levy. "The crop will be harvested by the last of August. This will assist in relieving the wheat market and make bread cheaper."

OVER $22,000,000 IN STEEL EARNINGS

NEW YORK, April 28.—The United States Steel Corporation reported net earnings for the first three months of this year almost $5,000,000 greater than earnings for the corresponding quarter of last year. The total, $22,021,268, was more than $1,000,000 in excess of general expectations.

In the opinion of Wall street that proved clearly that the recent lamentations and wage-cutting threats of the managers were made for a political purpose, with the intention of intimidating the tariff cutters in Washington.

The steel trust's report was received jubilantly in the street.

Analyzing the corporation's statement, it was seen that the earnings for March last were much higher than for February, and that those for February were better than those in January.

The amount of unfilled orders on hand at the end of March was only 3,542,595 tons, as compared with 3,765,545 tons at the corresponding date last year. But then, it was pointed out, the present unfilled orders are all "live," that is to say, they are filled as quickly as possible. In former years the trust, in its report, has been carrying what are known as "contingent" orders under the head of "unfilled."

The surplus after all interest and dividend payments for the quarter ending March 31 was $3,020,074, against $7,865 for March 31, 1908.

The 2 per cent. rate on the common stock and the 7 per cent. on the preferred was continued.

CITY CLERK KILLS NEGRO DISTURBERS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 28.—Two negroes were killed and one injured by City Clerk Jones of East Lake in front of the City Hall while the crowd was in session. The negroes were trying to break up the meetings as a result of the arrest of their friends having been arrested and convicted of running a blind tiger.

$30,000 FOR LOSS OF EYE.

NEW YORK, April 28.—George W. Kellogg, salesman for a brewing company in Brooklyn, has been awarded a verdict for $30,000 for the loss of his right eye. Mr. Kellogg, about five years ago, while riding a bicycle near Prospect Park, was struck by the shaft of an ambulance owned by the Church Charity Foundation.

BAR BROTHER FROM CAPTAIN HAINS' TRIAL

NEW YORK, April 28.—Thornton Jenkins Hains, himself acquitted of the murder of William F. Annis, is barred from the trial of his brother, Captain Peter C. Hains, Jr., charged with the crime. Not only as a probable witness for the defense is he excluded, but it is said that his brother's lawyers have asked him to remain away fearing the effect his presence might have upon the jury.

The trial of Captain Hains moved rapidly to-day after the opening address of the assistant prosecutor, Mr. Gregg, who declared the killing of Annis was a deliberate murder. A significant feature of the address was that all references to Thornton Hains were ruled out by Justice Garretson.

Captain Hains was closely watched by several atlenists in court to-day. His father and another brother, Major John P. Hains, were the only witness who were not excluded.

Hains Listless.

Captain Hains, sitting in his usual listless attitude, did not give any indication that he took a single word of the opening address. He sat hunched up inside his big overcoat with the collar turned up about his ears and with his face toward his father.

Among the first witnesses were George Y. Skinner, who identified some maps of the scene of the tragedy; Frederick E. Herbert, a member of the Bayside Yacht Club; Harvey G. Rockwell, a prominent witness on the Thornton Hains trial, and Dr. L. H. Schmuck, the hospital physician.

Charles A. Birchfield, the close friend of Annis, cross-examined by McIntyre, was asked:

Q.—When the shooting was occurring did you not say, "For God's sake, is he crazy?' and did you not so testify at the precious trial? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Well, to whom did you say that? A.—To no one in particular.

Q.—Did you say that because of something you noticed in his face or action. A.—No, it was simply an exclamation.

Alienists in Court.

At this point Dr. George Foster, the alienist, took his seat near the Captain. In addition, Dr. Edward Hicks was in court at the side of Mr. Dewitt to give the prosecutor professional advice. Dr. Foster closely observed Captain Hains and every little characteristic movement was carefully noted.

Herbert Fancke, a yacht club member, testified that after he was shot, Annis said: "You have made an awful mistake. You have got the wrong man."

PART OF REWARD IN BOAS CASE IS PAID

Adolph G. Hoelscher, the Beverly street bookbinder, is in New York conferring with Arthur E. Boas, the wealthy silk manufacturer, who offered the $5,000 reward for the return of his daughter, Adele. Hoelscher, it is understood, has been paid a sum of money in settlement of the reward that he claimed, after seeing the runaway girl in the South station and notifying Boas in New York on Monday. How much money has been paid by Boas to settle the claim no one will divulge.

HISGEN GIVES PROOF OF OIL TRUST GREED

If there were any doubt left in the minds of any member of the senate that the Standard Oil monopoly crushes competition and that it really controls the so-called "independent" oil companies, affidavit which Thomas L. Hisgen has secured from Max Wexler, No. 25 Gore street, East Cambridge, who has had a demonstration of the Standard's methods will help to clear that doubt away.

Mr. Hisgen, for three successive years, has had a bill introduced in the Legislature making discrimination in any commercial dealing in a necessary commodity a punishable offence. Each time it was killed. This year the committee reported adversely on the bill, but the House by a vote of 132 to 51 substituted the Hisgen measure. It comes up in the Senate to-day on its third reading.

The affidavit obtained by Mr. Hisgen shows the close relation between concerns like the Jenney and other companies and the parent octopus. It is not so very long ago that Mr. Jenney indignantly denied to a legislative committee that his concern was controlled by the Standard.

Wexler says he was in the grocery and provision business at No. 75 Gore street, East Cambridge, and retailed kerosene oil. At the beginning he bought it from the Standard at nine cents a gallon and occasionally sold for the same price from the New England Oil Company.

After eight months or so the Bay State Oil Company sold it to him for eight cents, the Standard meeting that bid for the cutting 1c. On the 15th of December, 1902, he decided to go into the wholesale business and run an oil wagon. He made a contract with the Jenney Manufacturing Company of No. 8 India street, this city for 200,000 gallons, which they agreed to deliver for 6 cents. They were to deliver within six months.

After about 3,000 gallons per week had been delivered up to January he swears Mr. Jenney notified him that the Standard Oil Company had requested that the Jenney Company sell no more oil to Wexler and that if it did not agree to this order the Standard proposed to sell at 5½ cents.

About that time, Wexler says, Edward L. Dilloway, treasurer of the Jenney Manufacturing Company, told him that if he would stop selling oil the Jenney Company would buy his horses, wagon, harness, etc., everything he was using in the business, his license and give him a good job in Iowa.

He accepted the proposition and, after working for only two weeks in his new place, was discharged under orders, he says Mr. Jenney told him, from the Standard.

After he was discharged, he said, he tried to buy oil from the Standard Oil company, the Valvoline Oil Company, the Bay State Oil Company and the New England Oil Company. All refused to sell to him at all.

Mr. Hisgen asks what more do reasonable men want to be convinced that all of these companies are mere masks for the Standard, and that it is engaged in a conspiracy to destroy all competition and will permit no man to do business save in compliance with its orders.

The AMERICAN is Boston's great home paper.

YOUNG COLT SUED FOR GAMBLING DEBT

NEW YORK, April 28.—R. G. Colt, husband of Ethel Barrymore, is defendant in a civil suit brought as the result of an alleged gambling debt of $1,000 incurred during his college days at Yale. Mr. Colt claims that at the time he drew the check he was only twenty years old. He pleads that he defrayed "illegal," or not being of legal age. The check was made payable to "W. T. S. Thompson or bearer," and was on the City Bank of New Haven.

He replied, "I'd kill off a fhu."

By A. J. LAMBERT.

Special Correspondent of the Boston American with the Roosevelt Party in Africa.

Special Cable to Boston American.

NAIROBI, British East Africa, April 28.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, with true hunter's ardor, is hard at work with his gun. His native trackers have not followed so strenuous a hunter for years, and already Colonel Roosevelt has killed specimens of nearly all the fauna characteristic of the Kapiti plain.

Mr. Roosevelt has not yet taken up the sport of lion killing, although Bana are scattered on the plains. The biggest game he has yet shot is the wild beast, or gnu. In fact he has been advised by veterans like Selous and Cunningham not to undertake his first lion kill until he is thoroughly hardened and familiar with all the preliminaries of the hunt. He is accordingly practising on smaller game and making best plans for the killing of his first lion.

SUFFRAGETTES ON 'FIRE' LINE

LONDON, April 28.—The international parliament, representing women of twenty countries, banded together to demand equal civil rights, is the one weird event of the week in London.

An immense demonstration was made in Albert Hall, heralded by a procession of a thousand women workers. Carrying 500 ancient watchmen's lanterns and all the emblems of a hundred trades, they marched from Eaton square to Albert Hall. The lanterns had no political significance. They were introduced only for picturesque effect.

The suffragettes are on the firing line, and whenever they come in view "over the yanks of Tuscany can scarce forbear to cheer."

The American president, Mrs. Chapman Catt, neither blessed them at all nor cursed them at all, holding herself strictly neutral, but her audience blessed them all together.

It was a scene of tumultuous enthusiasm that hailed the appearance of Miss Despard, leader of the extreme wing of the suffragette forces, when, from her prison experiences, she rose to address the meeting. This showed unmistakably the real sentiment of women suffragists throughout the world.

'PINK TICKET' CASE SETTLED

SPRINGFIELD, April 28.—Just before a jury was to be empanelled before Judge Pierce in the Superior Court to-day to sit in the trial of the suit brought by Attorney John F. Maher of this city against Henry M. Whitney of Brookline, who was defeated in the famous "Pink Ticket" Democratic convention for the nomination for Governor in 1907, Mr. Whitney appeared in court and settled the case.

The suit was for $345 for procuring evidence in the Bartlett-Whitney controversy, which was tried before the Ballot Law Commission in Boston, after the "Pink Ticket" convention, when Mr. Whitney was defeated in the fight for the gubernatorial nomination.

Mr. Whitney declined to give the details of the settlement.

stand. I have a statement to make to the Court. On the 15th of this month I requested from counsel from the defence that alienists of the government be allowed to examine the defendant. I had reason to believe then that the defence in this case would be insanity. That belief was not unfounded as the claim of the defence discloses.

"I have not received any answer to that request and I now ask an opportunity for alienists of the government to examine Chester S. Jordan. I desire this examination for the purpose of seeking evidence to substantiate the claim of the defence in that Chester S. Jordan has been, was at the time of the tragedy, and is now suffering from epileptic insanity."

Judge Stevens then asked: "What do you say, Mr. Bartlett?"

Attorney Pratt, after consulting with Mrs. Bartlett and Mr. Sullivan, said:

"It comes with all grace, Your Honor, for the District Attorney to criticise the defence in open court, when for months and months the District Attorney refused permission to counsel for the defence to examine the exhibits taken by him from the body of Mrs. Jordan."

Must Protect Jordan's Rights.

The person, your Honor," said Attorney Pratt, "that we did not hear the request of the District Attorney was that no person, alienist or other, can come to a real understanding of the condition of this defendant without talking to his mind without getting from that talk, from its incoherence, or perhaps the rambling, something that should not be divulged by the prisoner and which might possibly be raised for use at trial.

"The prisoner has a constitutional right. He is not obliged to give evidence against himself, and he is not obliged to say any thing to anybody that might be called in afterward as evidence against him. In declining to accede to the request of the District Attorney, counsel for the defendant are simply safeguarding his constitutional rights, and it is a grave question whether we have a right to allow him to talk, when with that right given the alienists with whom he talks might take the stand against him."

Hold Conference To-day.

"We are willing that our alienists shall make an examination of Jordan with the two alienists of the Government. We are willing that they shall talk with Jordan, confer with each other and make a report of testify separately, but with the understanding that this examination shall be to determine the mental state of the prisoner and that nothing he may say shall be used upon the witness stand by any of the alienists."

Judge Stevens then said:

"Counsel should confer upon this matter and the examination should take place early. The court has no power to make an order, but hopes that counsel can agree and arrange so that the examination may take place without any delay to the trial."

District Attorney Higgins and Attorney Pratt both stated that they would confer to-day at the earliest opportunity.

PRISONER WEEPS AS AGED MOTHER TELLS OF BOYHOOD

Mrs. Mary E. Jordan, his aged mother, was first called. Her cross examination was continued by District Attorney Higgins.

The aged mother who has come to the aid of her son in the crisis of his life, who is baring the innermost secrets of her life to save him, was dressed in deepest mourning. She wore blue-black glasses and spoke in a low tone of voice.

Q.—Mrs. Jordan, at the close of yesterday's session, I asked you the name of your family physician and you said it is Dr. George Mahoney, did you not? A.—Yes.

Q.—Does he live in West Somerville? A.—Yes

Q.—Has he been your family physician since you came to Somerville seven years ago? A.—Yes.

Q.—Are your daughters older or younger than your sons? A.—Older.

Q.—Did your daughters go to school in Indianapolis? A.—Yes.

Q.—When Elmer left high school did he go to work? A.—Yes, he went to work for the American and United States Express Companies.

Q.—What wages did he get? A.—He got $50 and $70 a month.

Hold Conference To-day.

We are willing that they shall talk with Jordan, confer with each other and make a report or testify separately, but with the understanding that this examination shall be to determine the mental state of the prisoner and that nothing he may say shall be used upon the witness stand by any of the alienists."

Judge Stevens then said:

Q.—You say he didn't play as other boys did? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you ever see him play football, tennis or baseball? A.—No.

Mrs. Livermore was then questioned in re-direct examination.

Q.—There was a man sitting on the fence who saw that gate incident, wasn't there? A.—Yes.

Q.—And he spoke to you about it? Where is that man now? A.—He's dead.

District Attorney Higgins then asked:

Q.—What was that man's name? A.—Horace Lewis.

INDIANA DOCTOR TESTIFIES THAT HE TREATED JORDAN

Dr. S. M. Abbott of Indianapolis was called. He said that he retired from practice two years ago.

Q.—Did you know Phineas G. Jordan? A.—Yes, sir. I first became acquainted with him in 1873 or 1874.

Q.—Do you remember his bringing his son to you? A.—Yes, to the best of my recollection he brought his son to me about the first of November, 1900.

Q.—Did you make an examination of the son? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Did you treat him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did the boy come to you again? A.—He did not.

The next witness was George A. Mills of Indianapolis. He said that he made the acquaintance of Mr. Jordan in 1875 and that he lived on the same street with Mr. Jordan, near there about 1891 or 1892.

Q.—Did you at any time observe Chester on the street while you were living on the same street with him? A.—Yes, the street was the boys' playground, and he used to play ball there. I could watch them from the front yard.

Had Fit on the Street.

Q.—Tell us what you observed of his speech and conduct in relation with other boys? A.—He didn't appear as other boys would in play. He would break off and deeply and sit down all by himself. He appeared to have a sullen disposition. He seemed to be somewhat backward.

Q.—Did you ever observe him in an altercation with other boys? A.—No.

Q.—When Chester was about eighteen years old, did you observe him in some fits? A.—About eleven years ago I observed him in a melady on Washington street, Indianapolis, midway between Illinois and Meridian streets. I was going East on Washington street, and midway between these two streets I saw a crowd gathered. As I drew up the group I saw Chester Jordan. He was lying on his back, frothing from the mouth and in his eyes had a distorted look. The nerves of his body were very slightly. I placed him in this position, and by the help of a stranger we moved him to the curbing and held him up against a horse block. He must have been in that position for twenty-five minutes before he came to.

Q.—Did he speak? A.—No.

Q.—Did he make an endeavor to speak? A.—He didn't try to speak.

FATHER'S NEPHEW TRIED TO KILL WIFE AND HANGED SELF

Q.—Your husband died when? A.—Twenty-four years ago.

Q.—Was he a relative of Phineas G. Jordan, the father of the defendant? A.—He was a nephew.

Q.—After your marriage were there any differences upon the part of your husband? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he at any time attempt to take your life? A.—He did.

Q.—How many acts of violence were there on the part of your husband toward you or himself? A.—Three.

Q.—Describe these acts to the jury. A.—The first was in September, 1883. I was awakened about 4 o'clock in the morning and found my husband standing by my bedside, with a club raised over my head. I rolled out and jumped from the bed and out of the house. He ran twelve miles into the country. He was then taken to the City Hospital.

Mrs. Orr then told how her husband cut his throat, but lived, and later hanged himself.

JORDAN COULDN'T TALK PLAINLY FOR YEARS, SAYS SISTER

Mrs. Nellie J. Kendall, another sister of the defendant, took the witness stand. She was dressed entirely in black with the exception of a white waist. She wore a black veil and carried a memorial book. She testified that she lived at No. 61 Highland park, Somerville. She was then questioned by Attorney Sullivan.

Q.—Now Mrs. Kendall I want to ask you if Chester Jordan when he was a child? A.—Yes. He was troubled with it until long after he started to go to school. It was almost impossible to understand him when he would speak.

Q.—Do you remember any incident of his childhood days? A.—Yes. I remember Mother sending me to the rear into a clothes post in the back yard of our home.

Q.—Where was he? A.—He was on right into it, ran directly at it, and knocked himself down. He fell on the ground when he ran into it. He was about eight years old at the time.

Q.—What can you say of him talking distinctly and fluently from that time on? A.—I can't say much of that. He was a very nervous child and for years he could not fight. They always called him a baby.

Backward in School.

Q.—What other nickname did the family call him if you remember? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Do you remember him being called "Kid" by the members of your family? A.—Yes, for we always considered him a kid. I put cold applications to his neck and head with other boys? A.—We considered him backward.

Q.—When did you leave Indianapolis? A.—I went to Europe in 1894. We spent a year Sumger in Paris and then we came direct to Somerville, living at No. 48 Chestnut street.

Q.—Where was Chester married? A.—At my home in Somerville.

Q.—And you see him from time to time? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see him the week of September 1 last? A.—Yes, on Wednesday evening. (This is the night he is alleged to have dismembered his wife's body.)

Q.—How did his conduct compare that night with other times that you have seen him? A.—I noticed nothing unusual.

Q.—What did he do that evening? A.—He played pool.

Q.—Where was Mom? A.—My father and brother.

Mrs. Kendall was not cross-examined.

Phineas G. Jordan, the aged father of the prisoner, was the next witness. While his father testified Jordan sat with head bowed in the courtroom, chewing gum all the time. He was questioned by Attorney Sullivan:

Q.—Do you remember an occasion when there was something the matter with your boy? A.—I do, about sixty days before we left Indianapolis for Boston. That was the latter part of September, 1900. Chester was ill. I took him to a specialist.

Q.—What was the last time before September 1 that you saw Chester? A.—One or two weeks before and his wife was with him.

Q.—What doctor did you take Chester to in 1900? A.—Dr. S. M. Abbott.

Q.—When did you come to Boston? A.—In September, 1901.

Mr. Jordan Cross-Examined.

Q.—What is Dr. Abbott's address? A.—No. 16 North Illinois street, Indianapolis.

Mr. Jordan was then cross examined by District Attorney Higgins:

Q.—How old a boy was Chester, in school? A.—A part of the time he was in the same grade.

Q.—How much of that? A.—I am not sure.

Q.—How long did Chester go to high school in Indianapolis? A.—I don't know.

Q.—He was there under your observation? A.—I couldn't say positively.

Q.—How long did Elmer go to high school? A.—I don't know.

Q.—What is the difference in the ages of the two boys? A.—About two years.

NEIGHBOR SAYS JORDAN SUFFERED FROM DIZZY SPELLS

Mrs. Mary A. Stedman, who lived to the Jordan flat at one time, was questioned by Attorney Sullivan.

Q.—While you were there was Jordan troubled with headaches? A.—Yes, and they became very frequent during the latter part of the time we lived there.

Q.—What did he say? He said that he was dizzy and all shaken up. Then he got a cold and congestion and said that that his head felt "light, light, light." He a brother living in Boston and he got Cuticura Soap, then apply the Ointment freely. I also took Cuticura Resolvent in the form of a short [illegible] and soon stopped running, the flesh began to heal and I knew I was to get well again. AGONY OF ECZEMA BEYOND WORDS

Whole Body a Mass of Raw, Torturing Humor — Hair All Fell Out and Ears Seemed Ready to Drop Off — Clothing Would Stick to Bleeding Flesh — Hoped Death Would End Fearful Suffering.

CASE SEEMED HOPELESS BUT CUTICURA CURED HER

"Words cannot describe the terrible eczema I suffered with. It broke out on my head and kept spreading until it covered my whole body. I was almost a solid mass of raw flesh. Added to my foul, I looked more like a piece of raw beef than a human being. The pain and agony I endured seemed more than I could bear. Blood and pus oozed from the great sore on my scalp, from under my hands, and matter ran all over my body. My ears were so crusted and swollen that I was afraid they would drop off. Every hair in my head fell out. I could not sit down, for my clothes would stick to the great sore on my body, making me cry out from the pain. My family doctor did all he could, but it got worse and worse. My condition was awful. I did not think I could live, and wanted death to come and end my frightful sufferings.

"In this condition my mother-in-law begged me to try the Cuticura Remedies. I said I would, but had no hope of recovery. But oh, what blessed relief I experienced after using Cuticura Ointment. It cooled the bleeding and aching flesh and brought me the first rest sleep I had had in weeks. It was as grateful as ice to a burning tongue. I would bathe with Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Soap, then apply the Ointment freely. I also took Cuticura Resolvent in the form of a short [illegible] and soon stopped running, the flesh began to heal and I knew I was to get well again. WITH four days left before the $100 gold award is to be made to the six boys and six girls who lead in this week's vote getting in the free Vacation Tour Contest, subscriptions are coming in piles. Every one of the candidates is displaying activity in the hunt, not alone for one of the tours, but for one of the twelve gold prizes as well.

The real vote getting battle for the souvenir trips Around the World, to Europe, New York, Washington and Niagara Falls is just starting. Very few of the candidates even made an attempt to display their real strength before. The offer of $100 in gold has brought them out of their shell.

Nip and Tuck Battle.

It is interesting to watch the keen contest between the boys and girls to poll the heaviest vote this week. The girls started with a rush, then the boys jumped in the lead. Now they are about on equal terms. It is a nip and tuck contest, with first one and then the other leading.

When the contest for the gold ends at midnight Saturday some large totals will be piled up, and the results will be printed on Tuesday. The delay in printing the winners will be only long enough to permit of the credit and count of the subscriptions mailed from the distant points in New England before the midnight hour Saturday, and which will not reach the BOSTON AMERICAN until Monday morning.

Two White Candidates.

A rival candidate representing the employes of the R. H. White Company appeared in the ranks to-day in the person of Peter McDermott, No. 90 Silver street, South Boston. The other candidate representing the large department house is Benjamin Morris of No. 101 Waumbeck street, Roxbury, whose father is buyer in one of the departments. McDermott has sent out a request to his friends to leave votes for him with the examiners in the millinery department, and he has decorated himself with a button for vote getting purposes.

Principal L. A. Ross of the Saugus High School, has expressed his interest in the AMERICAN'S Tour Contest in a marked way. There are two rival girl contestants in the school, Elsie M. Brown of No. 5 Maple street, Chittenden, who also has the support of the River Works, Lynn, and Miss Agnes McIver of No. 500 Central street. Both girls are earnest workers and Mr. Ross has promised the support of the entire school to the girl who stands highest in the list at the end of the two coming weeks. Both are trying hard for the gold prizes.

Rambler Favorite.

A letter from George P. O'Brien, president of the Rambler A. C., indorses Leo A. Hughes, No. 777 Columbia road, Dorchester, as the candidate of the club. This is in addition to the indorsement of Hughes by the firemen of Boston. Hughes is active this week in his efforts to land one of the gold prizes.

Harold Case, No. 1,057 Columbus avenue, Roxbury, sends an appeal to his friends in the First Free Will Baptist Church on Warren street, also the Boylston Congregational Church of Jamaica Plain to help him get in the front ranks for the gold as well as the tour prizes. Case is an enthusiastic worker and is meeting with success.

Teacher Helps Her.

Olga K. Seaberg, No. 11 Thurman street, Everett, is a confident young miss who is piling up subscriptions and is enthusiastic on the question of the tours. She is the favorite of the Lafayette School of Everett and has enlisted the support of her teacher, Miss Rose Gould, whom she is planning to take with her as her chaperone. Misses Gould and Seaberg are working hand in hand and with the aid of the Seaberg family, the head of which is employed in the Tufts Metre Company, give promise of strong contention for the prizes.

A letter from Mrs. Martha Holmes, No. 4 Mystic avenue, Melrose, tells of the special claims upon one of the tours by Miss Holmes of the Lincoln School. This young candidate was born on Columbus Monday, in October 1895, and a prophetic professor has predicted that some time during his career he would go around the world. His friends, relatives and neighbors are rallying to his support to make the winning of one of these tours the realization of the prophecy. Holmes has friends in Boston, South Boston, Chelsea, Roxbury and Melrose.

Now remember, boys and girls, any one of you, fourteen years old or over, anywhere within the boundaries of the States of Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont and that part of Connecticut east of the Connecticut river, is eligible.

The nominations have not closed. You can enter to-day, qualify in half an hour and then get busy gathering subscriptions and votes.

A contestant entering to-day has as good a chance of carrying off one of the gold prizes and one of the major prizes, by entering the race to-day, as the contestant who now heads the voting list. The offer of the gold prizes this week is for the largest number of votes by means of paid-in-advance subscriptions and the winning of one of these prizes may serve to put a new entrant at the head of the entire list.

The field of operation is large and unlimited and there is room for all to work, so go right at it, boys and girls, and gather in the efforts and assistance of your friends, relatives and schoolmates.

If there is anything you do not understand, write to the Around-the-World Editor and he will be very glad to explain. Possibly there may be some matters on which you are in doubt. Wait, then, write to him. He will explain, and in doing so may help some other doubtful boy or girl.

We have on hand a supply of souvenir postal cards for the use of the contestants and any boy or girl who wishes to distribute some of these among their friends may have them by calling on the Around-the-World Editor. These will materially prove a great help to you in reminding your friends that you need them every moment, in order to win one of the prize tours. They will help you, you know they will, both with their own subscriptions and others.

LOWELL, April 28.—It was the opening diamond day of the season for this busy town which was in holiday attire for the breaking of the championship race with New Bedford facing the Lowell tribe.

After playing that thirteen-inning game with Fall River yesterday the local fans were convinced that Captain Fleming had a crowd of ball tossers who could trust with any other gang in the New England League.

So fast that Lowell had lost three games already played in this city and they did not cut much figure with the rooters, as every one of the reverses were the kind of the close score order, and showed that the team was of the fighting variety which would come into its own sooner or later.

The Wanlers were flying high starting the year with two clean victories and proved a big card for the first day's entertainment.

THONEY OUT OF RED SOX GAME FOR A MONTH

Red Sox will be without the services of Jack Thoney for some time to come. The speedy little left fielder is suffering with malaria, and the physicians say he will not be even ready to practice for a month at least.

Trifling Jack" has not been well all season and during the Southern trip was always ailing.

This morning Dr. Cliff took a culture from Thoney's ear, and after putting it under a microscopic test pronounced Jimmy in a very bad condition, saying he has had a typical case of malaria. The patient was attending Thoney say that with proper care and treatment and a good solid rest of about a month Jack will be able to don his uniform.

Thoney has played in but three games so far this season, and on account of his ill health has been batting away below his usual average. In ten times at bat he has made but one hit, an average of .100. By reason of his weak hitting Thoney's absence from the game will not decrease the working of the team, and as between Harry Hooper and Harry Hess to battle for the place in the left position.

DOVES STILL LEAD

Baseball News and Notes

Dave Brain is playing a fine third for Buffalo. He seems to have all another whirl in the big leagues ere he quits the game.

If the Giants only had Mathewson, the Western outfield to pair with Ames they could head that first bid for battery question worked out from A to Z.

Will Tim Jordan ever get a dozen home runs again this season? All Brooklyn would like to know as far in advance as possible.

Duke Farrell succeeds Ned Hanlon as Highlanders' coaching. When he walked across the field at the Polo Grounds Saturday with a new suit on for $15 shillings and sixpence, "Oh, you, George!"

Some of the Cleveland outfielder, who is fighting hard for a job, could help, under these circumstances. That will help keep him on the payroll.

Malarkey, who pitched an inning now and then for the Giants, has been purchased by Buffalo from Jersey City and will report to Manager Gochnauer for duty.

Jersey City has both Hanford and Hamilton, Rafferty confessing if the game had to be sent in by telephone.

Jimmy Casey is inclined to doubt now that he will start Tommy Leach in left field. When Leach pitched Saturday in relief for Boston to no to Detroit Casey decided to keep him on the box and shift Gardner to left field.

In Dan Murphy, Connie Mack has a player whose services are not appreciated to their full value, either by the Philadelphia Nationals or rooters, and now he is rooting a bowling streets for the Athletics' opponents.

The Cincinnati team must not be overlooked this season. Their great start is not a lucky one. Griffith has a great bunch of pitchers in Lobert, Mitchell, Packett, Oakes, McLean and Ruggles, and they are in great shape this season, which naturally, makes them all the more dangerous.

There are probably more "Cy Youngs" playing baseball to-day than any other name. Every once in a while one has at least one player by this name in his roster.

Manager Billy Sullivan could not be ashamed of his showing so far. He has worked in remarkably fine shape, but before, and on a level with the Giants, Reds and Cubs, and Joe has been in the managing business for a long time.

What a body blow it would be if the Reds would win the pennant without Ed Walsh and the Sox! Both Boston teams signed Nimes. One perfectly good battery would be dropped out of mind if some catastrophe struck the best battery in the league, and now he is trotting a bowling streets for the Athletics' opponents.

Manager Gleason of the Reading (Pa.) team has signed Frank Caldwell, catcher of Shamokin, member of the noted Caldwell family of ball players. It is said that he will be the highest salaried catcher in the Atlantic League. Caldwell played last season in the Western League.

Tully Easterly, the Napa find, is probably one of the fastest ballplayers in the business, owing to the fact that he has been in the game for only a few months. He has not been in the game for by length of time.

Big John Anderson of Worcester will be a welcome addition to the Providence Grays. He is stated to cover first base.

The last report from John Kling is that he will join the Cubs within a month.

Lynn opens its 1909 baseball season this afternoon at Ocean Park under Manager Billy Hamilton, the old Boston National player, with Mayor James E. Rich throwing out the first ball to start the game with Fall River. Lynn played its first league game last Saturday at Fall River, and Manager O'Brien's boys blanked the Shoemakers, 1 to 0. The game this afternoon will find the Lynn players hot after the long end of the score.

Preceding the game the ball players of both teams will parade from the hotel Seymour through Central Square and up market street in carriages, headed by Sulies Eighth Regiment band. A flag raising was scheduled at the grounds.

Manager Hamilton was due to get into business this afternoon after the trouncing he got from Cy yesterday at the hands of the Whalers. He was to replace Pete Cheseuse, changing Wallace over to right field.

If he decided at the last moment to get into the fray this is the first game he has figured in so far this year. The Lynn fans hoped he would pay for they want to see the best strength of the Lynn Club.

Pete Cheseuse will be dispensed with and steps are already on foot to sell him to one of the other New England league clubs. Pete was in the holdout class to start the season with and that has not helped him any to stay here.

With fair skies and gentle breezes Ocean Park will be taxed to its limit of capacity this afternoon, no eager are the Lynn fans to support Hamilton and his men in their fight to bring the pennant to Lynn this season.

Sidney Abbott, the Wakefield pitcher with Lynn and Harry Wormwood the former Worcester and Eastern league pitcher are cooded to work again. They are pitted against each other Saturday at Fall River and had a pitchers' battle. Both are eager to get another go and Abbott promises to make a different showing in that event. With McGillery still on the hospital list Lynn will play One Dunn on first.

HARRY LEWIS TO BOX IN PARIS

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 28.—Harry Lewis of this city, one of the claimants to the welterweight championship, is arranging his affairs in such a manner as to allow him to make a trip to Paris, where he has an offer of $10,000 to take part in three fights.

Lewis has been in communication with Manager Dorman of the Paris Hippodrome, where all the big fights that have lately delighted the French have been held, and a letter has reached him from Dorman in which he makes the proviso that the Philadelphian sign a contract to remain in France for a year.

The AMERICAN is Boston's great home paper.

FIRST PITCHER TO WEAR GLOVE WAS NIG CUPPY

"Nig" Cuppy was the first pitcher to wear a glove while in the box and the innovation was one of the sensations of baseball fifteen or sixteen years ago.

"Cy" Young recalls the advent of the hand padding and Cuppy called on a friend one day and was informed that he would see a strange sight that afternoon. "Keep your eyes open when you see Cuppy this afternoon," the friend said. "Why, he wears a glove when pitching." This was an unheard of thing at that time. Sure enough when "Cy" went to the ball park that afternoon there was Cuppy wearing a hand covering. It wasn't the big capacious things of the present day, but it was large enough to take off the sting of the ball.

The precedent established by Cuppy was the talk of the circuit for weeks. Many baseball critics of the old school rushed into print declaring that the pitcher could not grasp the ball properly because the glove would interfere. Others were of the thought the use of hand covering was too ladylike for real live ballplayers.

But the glove for pitchers and fielders was retained and has saved many a damaged finger and many a bruised hand. Without the glove a lot of curves and plays common nowadays would be impossible.

GOES TO GREAT CONGRESS.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 29.—Lieutenant Colonel James C. Sanford of the Corps of Engineers will sail on May 4 as the representative of the United States to the annual meeting of the permanent International Association of Navigation Congresses, to be held in Brussels on May 17.

HAWKINS STAR OF MET'S RACES

Hawkins, 2:13¾, the trotting gelding that "Long Shot" Cox campaigned to his record, plainly showed his mettle in the opening matinee of the Metropolitan Driving Club at Charles River Speedway by winning from a select field of starters, and, despite the extreme cold wind that raged, the horses and the heavy footing, turned the course in the fast time of 1:07½ and 1:07.

J. V. N. Smith is the owner of Hawkins. To say that he was a proud person after the victory is putting it mildly, and he had many friends to help him. Mr. Smith is one of the oldest owners in the club, having joined when the initial meeting for membership was held at Young's Hotel.

The first heat in this race was captured by Hugh W. B. W. Gove's considerable trotter. His time was 1:11½. Susie F. Hall was the only other likely winner, but Harry Wood didn't get her to going till the final heat, when she was an excellent second to Hawkins. Earl Kirk finished third in the heat.

Thyne, 2:08¾, that is matched against the Providence gelding, Jim Perry, 2:09½, and Billy Rose for his only opponent, is getting the opening heat in 1:10 but the mare was queen in the following, each in 1:07. This is the dinner event, and Shamokin could not start, though sometime, while W. S. Parks, owner of Geiger, 2:09¼, did not care to race in having some other member drive his gelding.

The winners of the first race, with best time, follows: Minnie Hailston, in 1:20; Billy Rose, in 1:12½; Louise A., in 1:07; J. Furbush, in 1:10½; Jean Swift, G. D. Thompson, in 1:09½; Edwin S. Heath, in 1:10; John Boy, driven by Joseph Rosetta (A. J. Furbush), in 1:07½; Robert Williamson, in 1:12.

The big crowd present attests that the interest in the sport will be even more liberally attended than has ever been the case. Starter A. J. Power did his work well, as did the other officials, while Jack Dorey, chairman of the racing committee, was the particular busy bee in the hive.

It was announced during the afternoon that Trainer Dick Lawrence has purchased of Charles Cox Harvard Cup winner, Miss Trixy N., 2:16¼. This mare has been raced over the half-mile tracks for the past three or four years, and always with success. Dick's hands she should show a radical improvement and still be a good money earner.

HARVARD CAPTAIN FREED BY COURT

Captain Edward P. Currier of the Harvard baseball team was vindicated in the Cambridge Court to-day on a charge of loitering. Just before he went South with the team Captain Currier and several students were in the Harvard square. A policeman told them to move on, and all did save Currier. He says the policeman got "intolerably sassy," and he was arrested. Currier secured a postponement till to-day.

Notes of the Red Sox Game

George McConnell caught a foul which would have fallen back of the grandstand, but the lanky first sacker not gotten his mitts in the way.

* * *

It was a little more comfortable for the bugs yesterday than on the previous day, but at that they had no easy time, at the wind was quite "uppish."

* * *

Buhl went down after missing three of the ones, when the whole team and all the fans were yelling for a hit.

* * *

Kaiser, who prides himself on a batting average of .666 per cent. in his attempt in the final round, was sent in to bat for Atkins in the last inning with two down and Carrigan on third, trying to get a chance to score. This manager Wagner, who had pitched a fine game, was deprived, and the young pitcher, Quinn, took his place. Weiser bat at the required amount of pitches and fanned, and did the same.

* * *

Manager Lake seemed to be in a little doubt as to whom he should send in to bat for Arellanes, and for a moment it appeared that "Pub" Spencer was going to attempt to work the trick.

* * *

Engle, the youngster who takes care of the left window for the Hilltoppers, cracked out a single in the right manner. This star also juggled the foul after Engle's batting hit and rolled to the fence, allowing a man to get to third.

* * *

Knight made a pretty one-hand catch of a throw from Rigney to catch Carrigan stealing and put the latter out at first in the fielding.

* * *

Rigney had about the widest curves of any left-handed twirler in the American League. These proved disastrous to seven of the Red Sox.

* * *

The first inning Austin got was a single, the drive which he salvaged from the high cross style, starting a double play.

* * *

Kid Elberfeld hurt his leg while running for home, and after going under by stay in the contest was forced to leave, giving way to Bill.

* * *

Bill made the first record of striking out every time he went to bat. Wilson did the same stunt three out of four times.

* * *

Morgan was the only one of the three twirlers used by the Red Sox who was knocked off the rubber. The other two were forced to get better line hits.

* * *

Gessler landed one one of Wilson's low ones and boosted the pill to center for two bases. This was Jess's only safe clout of the day.

BOSTON COLLEGE IN HARD GAME

To-morrow afternoon, at the Massachusetts Avenue Grounds, the Boston College nine will clash with the Niagara University team. The college boys will have a tough proposition on their hands, as the Buffalo-Cornell could do against this same team was to score a single run.

The lineup of the college team will be as follows: Captain O'Kane left field, "Bud" Ryan centre field and Corbett or McMahon right field. Callahan will play third while Pelt and Lane will play short and second base respectively. McDonald and Supple will cover the initial bag. Kraft will catch, for the coach, "Pop" Maher, has not decided whether he will use Levin or Maloney to pitch. The game scheduled for to-day with the Massachusetts Normal Arts team has been cancelled.

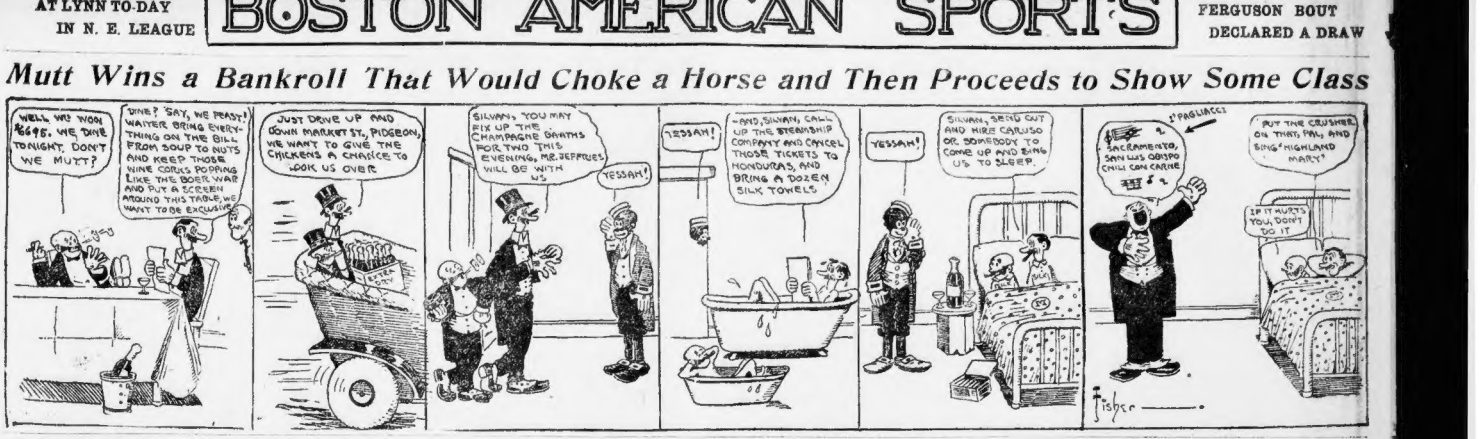
LANGFORD AND FERGUSON BOUT DECLARED A DRAW

Mutt Wins a Bankroll That Would Choke a Horse and Then Proceeds to Show Some Class



CULTURED CROWD SEES LANGFORD AND FERGUSON IN FIERCE 12-ROUND COMBAT

By ALLEN SANGREE.

We now know one reason why Teddy Roosevelt is popular in America. Twenty-five hundred Boston gentlemen sat three hours in a smoke laden arena gasping for blood. They wanted to see a negro man lift a white man or vice-versa. When the excitement was over and the very distinguished looking referee opened his hands by way of announcing: "Draw," those men bowled like bronzes. They thought the dark brute should have been credited with victory. They howled again when that short, wonderfully built human being, his skin black, but his heart determined, swathed himself in a pink bathrobe and left the ring Like Caesar bidding his assassins: "Strike," that negro, with an eloquent gesture, smiled and covered his face with the $4.95 toga and grinned. "I think I carried the battle to him," his think lips seemed to say.

Here's a picture of a fistic encounter in Boston. The place is a round building. High up on the rafters sitting a covey of boys who hang on to steam pipes and sweat to death. A few feet below them are rows and rows, every seat occupied, the aisles filled. The crowd looks as fine in Summer time and the crush was worse than a subway blockade.

Distinguished Audience.

A mere bagatelle. Who cares for the lad hanging to the rafters? The prominent citizen in the front seat is the one to watch. A Harvard coach sat next to me; an assistant district attorney was but one removed. It was a choice crowd who gazed on the gladiators battling in the arena.

Here was the real Roosevelt lure for blood. It began to boil at the first preliminary. The whirr and jam of a congested crowd, all drunk with the fighting spirit! There were beings from every walk of life in the vast auditorium rubbing elbows with the general assemblage.

Before the feature attraction began Young Nixon of Cambridge freed Young Kirkland of Roxbury. Probably not their right names. Nixon knocked the other fellow down four times. He stood up again wondering and gaping. Would you have enjoyed it, my lady? The toy from Roxbury stood with his mouth open, his eyes closed. Young Nixon simply hooked his right arm and hit him on the nose. He went down the fourth time. Well, there was some blood, anyway. "Good boy," yawned. He is an ironman, they tell me. He had five fights with Jack Johnson. "And Johnson is more scared of him than my wife was on earth," said the AMERICAN expert.

"This Ferguson was born in Moncton, New Brunswick, and is of Scotch descent," he added. "He sure to say: New Brunswick."

Sandy had hands like a woman, not small. His wrist was delicate, his mouth narrow, and his nose straight.

Fighting His Trade.

The black man was a foot shorter. His head looked small as an English walnut. He was thoroughly business. He knew his profession. He was crafty. Sometimes he would run away from the white man, who was out-weighed 40 to 50 pounds; rosin his feet, feel his ear, and do a cakewalk.

The white Scotchman aimed at that Ethiopian's round head with his left. When the boss arrived that head was lowered at half mast. As the blow started the nigger collapsed with right or left. Quite often he did not wait for the white man to lead. He did some leading himself. He rocked Sandy's head time and again with a left or right punch. He hammered Sandy on the kidneys. His sparring was wonderful.

The white man worried above his colored brother as high fruit overripened he would hug him. Langford's face turned toward the arena. Then you would see the colored fellow's eyes show white. He was scared. He did not know what that crazy Scotchman would do to him. He might suddenly throw him out of the ring. Ferguson had a wild eye.

The fight went twelve rounds. When it ended the situation seemed to be about like this. Ferguson had a bleeding nose and an uncertain equilibrium. He was injured worse than the negro. He had certainly been outpointed, just on points he should have had the decision. If the fight were carried to a finish it would be even money. They say that Sandy drinks too much and has lost his speed. This may be. But he put up a remarkable fight against a human fighting machine. Roosevelt would have hugely enjoyed the pleasantry. Boston took it to heart that the colored man was not officially proclaimed the victor.

THE BOUT BY ROUNDS.

ROUND ONE.

Sandy was the aim to lead, shooting a straight left to the nose, were Langford ripped left to body and right to head. Sandy missed with right and left. Langford missed with left. Sandy rushed Langford to ropes with right and left to head. Sandy missed with left and Langford countered with left to body. Sandy missed with left and Langford countered with

The Poet's Theme

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1909, by American Journal-Examiner

WHY should the poets of these pregnant times
Be asked to sing of war's unholy crimes;
To laud and eulogize the trade which thrives
On horrid holocausts of human lives?
Man was a fighting beast when earth was young.
And war the only theme when Homer sung.
'Twixt might and might the equal contest lay—
Not so the battles of our modern day.
Too often now the conquering hero struts
A Gulliver among the Liliputs.
Success no longer rests on skill or fate,
But on the movements of a syndicate.
Of old men fought and deemed it right and just,
To-day the warrior fights because he must,
And in his secret heart feels shame, because
He desecrates the higher manhood's laws.
Oh, there are worthier themes for poet's pen
In this great hour than bloody deeds of men.
The rights of many, not the worth of one;
The coming issues, not the battle done.
The awful opulence, the awful need,
The rise of brotherhood, the fall of greed.
The soul of man replete with God's own force—
The cry "to heights" and not the call "to horse."
Are there no better things in this great age
For pen of poet or voice of sage
Than those old tales of killing? Song is dumb
Only that greater songs in time may come.
When comes the bard—he whom the world waits for—
He will not sing of war.

His Heart in the Right Place

But He Had No Kinaness to Va te on His Family

By KENNETH HARRIS

"WELL all got our faults," said the storekeeper, with charitable unction. "I don't say but what Hen's got his, but his heart's in the right place, after all."

"There hain't no doubt about that," agreed Eben Baxter. "I reckon that's what made him start a fire under that team of his an' hitch 'em solid when they had to be shot. Good enough for 'em, too! A team of eight hundred pound hosses that wouldn't start a little two-ton load on an up hill pull ain't worth the powder to burst an' shoot. But, all the same," added Eben, savagely, "if I'd been there with two other husky men of my way o' thinkin', an' there'd happened to be a leetle bit o' stout rope ir'n around loose—"

"Rufe's the Preacher Bark Higginson in some respects," remarked Washington Hancock. "I don't reckon he'd would ever hearn tell o' Preacher Higginson, but there wasn't a many didn't know him down where I was raised. They nicker named him Bark, 'cause that was what whooped, but he was the only one that barked. That ain't never the truth. He jest took the truth as it come, an' gave it out the same way. He was a plain, good lookin' chunk, he was was tickled to death an' made the most of it, but if it was anyways ugly, he wouldn't go to no pains to pretty it up, an' he wouldn't lie.

"It's a kinder curious thing, Hancock went on, but along about the time Preacher Bark was a-preachin' the gospel over the soil of Nodoway there was a feller name o' Andy Bloss that was as like Hen Smith as two peas. One o' these here twins, Preacher Bark, or Rufe, two-fisted, high-livin' fellers that wasn't nobody's enemy but their own.

"Folks that didn't know like called him worthless, which he was, in a way, I reckon, but these that was real intimate with him, and talked with him an' got drunk with him day after day, an' nightly had better opportunities for insight into his soul, they said he was a pillow.

"I remember when there was a stranger, a six-foot feller with a red beard an' his toes out of his shoes, come into Bloss Hird that was onto the Job with both feet, so that she got any worm that was foolish enough to get out of bed at an unseemly hour. Likewise she Grabbed the Grub that stayed out late, so that to Opportunity escaped her.

"Of course this was a most Laborious Life for a Bird to lead who had married under the impression that she was getting a Strong Wing on which to Loaf, and now she is provide the Dough for her; but of-times, when she had worn her claws to the quick scratching for her Young, she would say:

"'Ah, well, this will not be for Long. Soon my Son will be Grown, and then my Labors will be lightened when he is able to go out into the World and make his Own living.'

"In the process of Time the Son grew up, but he took After his Father in being Born Tired, and seemed to think that the Old Home and the Food Mother provided was good enough for him, so why make a Change?

This View of the Subject, however, did not Appeal to Mrs. Hen, who gave him a Shove that Ousted him out of the Nest, and away from the Feed Trough.

"Go to," she said, "I've Scratched for you until you are Able to take care of yourself. Now Hustle or Starve."

"All right, I will," replied the Son. "If you will not Feed Me, I will have to Feed myself for I am too old that Starving is a most Unpleasant way to Croak."

Thereupon, the Little Rooster, who was thrown upon his own Resources, Got Busy, and he succeeded so well that in time he became the Cock of the Barn Yard, and took a Blue Ribbon in the Poultry Show.

In this same Vicinity there also dwelt a Woman who was the Proud Mother of a Babe that she considered as Marvellous that she could not understand why the Railroads did not run Excursions to see him.

"Did you ever see a Face that just ceases so much Intelligence?" she would say to the Ladies who came to visit her; "I must Raise him up very Carefully, because I can see that he is Destined to be President, and I wish to Prepare Him for the Position."

Now the Woman was Possessed of an Almost-Misled Husband who had strolled away one day and Forgotten to Come Back, so, like the Hen, she, too, had to Get Up and Get to support her family.

This she did Without Complaint. She Toiled Early and Late. She took Boarders and stood for the Dark Talk of those who want Without Fear Headsey Prices in order to give her Son the Benefits of an Education. Also she did a little Fine Sewing on the Side in order to provide him with Glad Rags.

The Poor Woman grew Hump Shouldered doing all this Work, but to those who Remonstrated with her for Killing Herself she would say:

"It will not be for Long, because my Son will soon be able to Support Himself, and perhaps Help Me."

In the process of Time the Son got Grown, and as the years went by some what Overgrown, but he showed no Symptions of hankering for Work and Independence. In fact, the only thing at which he seemed to Excel was in Taking Things Easy, and Blowing Perfect Rings of Cigarette Smoke.

He Didn't Fancy Working

"Perchance," said his Mother, "if he had the Shell of a Bank President it would Encourage him to try to do some thing," so she took her Hard Earned Dollars and went forth and bought him Silk Shirts and Fine Clothes, and when she returned she thus addressed him:

"Son, here are some things I have Brought you so that you may make a good appearance, as I expect you to find Work and help from now on."

"What, me work?" said the Son; "not on your life! I am very Comfortable as I am, and see No Reason to Change. Besides, you have had More Experience at Working than I have, and you had better keep on with the Job."

Did the mother shove the Lazy Son out of the House and Lock the Door, and tell him that he had to Work or Starve? Nay, Verily, She Wept a few Bitter Tears, and went on supporting him, and he became the Prize Bum and Loafer of the Community.

Moral—This Fable teaches that when it comes to Intelligence in Dealing with her Children that the Hen has got the Average Mother Hen a City Block.

PUT ALL THE LOAD ON THE POOR

Here's the system of American government in one small picture. The poorer people, the women especially, carry the load of government.

Wheat gambling and dear bread go together. Tariff tinkerers add enormously to the duty on the cheapest kind of stockings—NOTHING added to stockings of silk.

Every dollar spent by the mother of a family is taxed in one way or another. When she pays her rent she pays the taxes that the city thieves steal.

When she buys her bread she pays a tax to the wheat gambler. Her bills for food, for gas, for coal, all represent trust extortion.

When she buys cheap stockings for her children there is more tax.

And the man with a hundred millions has not a dollar of tax on his income. Government protects him, INSURES him for nothing. And the poor pay the piper!

If women could VOTE, and if men could THINK, this would end.

"Where You May Buy Joy for a Penny

By KATHERINE TYNAN HINKSON

(Tir na n'Og Is the Celtic Land of Eternal Youth)

YOU may buy joy for a penny yonder in Tir na n'Og.
If you were King of Ireland or but a barefoot rogue.
Your chances would be equal, for, och, the roads are many,
But they lead to one fair country where they sell joy for a penny.

THE king has got a goodly queen, and many a loyal vassal,
And the blessings of the poor are the keepers of his castle.
But his queen's hands cannot hold him, his queen's heart cannot keep;
For voices out of Tir na n'Og have called across his sleep.

"LET down, let down the drawbridge, bring in my horse from grass,
Let others loiter through their lives, and watch the shadows pass,
Longer and ever longer; at noon I must away,
When shadows are at shortest, and the time takes holiday."

THE king has ridden westward, the way the bright sun goes,
And the beggar by the roadside the selfsame calling knows;
The girl that begs beside him, and makes her arm his pillow,
He leaves her with a light farewell, and she must wear the willow.

NOW he that rides and wears a crown, and he that tramps his way,
Together find the selfsame goal at dropping of the day;
Though one has climbed the Golden Spears, one gone by lowlands fenny,
Both come at last to Tir na n'Og, where you may buy joy for a penny.

The Manicure Lady on Tillman

She Takes Issue With Him on His Tribute to the Ladies of U. S.

"DID you get that stuff in the paper about Senator Tillman?" asked the Manicure Lady.

"I didn't," said the Head Barber. "I stopped reading anything about him or his fights long ago."

"I'm sorry you didn't catch it," said the Manicure Lady. "It was a great tribute to us girls. He said that there was only one State in the Union, his State, South Carolina, where a married man stuck to his wife until the end, and never went on looking for some young pullet and a divorce.

"I never seen this Senator, George, but they tell me he is a wise fish, and I guess he is, because when a man gets up here you've gotta give it to him. Well, if what he says is true, or even nearly true, that's a great boost for us pullets. There is over forty States in the Union. If I haven't forgot my geometry, and in only one of these States does a married man stick to the fireside."

"You ain't a pullet," declared the unfeeling Head Barber. "You are too fat. Mister Tillman meant little slim girls like the angel child, or the Ethel butterfly, or whatever she was when her name used to be in the papers."

Head Barber Not Chivalrous

The Manicure Lady favored the Head Barber with a steely glance. "So I ain't a pullet, ain't I?" she hissed. "I suppose I am one of them Ruff Cochen hens. I suppose I have lost all them girlish graces which the poets sings about and which gets you into the front row in a Broadway production. Oh, well, I suppose I have it coming to me, and I have got it, but I never thought I would get it from you, George. I thought you was too chivalrous."

"I don't feel chivalrous this morning," the Head Barber admitted. "Bob Fulton and Freddie Block cleaned me out of six bones in the open pool game this morning, and I ain't allsteppings when it comes to trampling on a girl's feelings or anybody's feelings."

"Leaving out the peevishness," said the Manicure Lady, "it seems to me that there remark of Mr. Tillman's was an awful slur on the rest of the solid South.

"Take Virginia, for instance. Do you think them Virginians will like the insinuation that they are afraid to stick to their wives?

"Do you think the married gents of Tennessee, especially them that lives in Memphis and Nashville, where pullets is plentiful, will relish the idea that they are on the verge of trifling?

"Do you reckon the married men of Shreveport, La., will feel safe from now on, with that awful shadow hanging over their homes?"

Illinois Somewhat Doubtful

"I don't think nothing," declared the Head Barber. "The Yankees look pretty good, don't they?"

"Don't try to switch me off, George," said the Manicure Lady. "While we are on the pullet subject let us go through with it. How do you think the pillars of the churches down in Macon, Ga., would feel if their wives thought they was making eyes at the pullets in the choir? What do you think that the Southern gents of Montgomery, Ala., would say if their wives watched them up, when they went gunning for possums,

As Senator Tillman Sees the Situation

thinking that they was out to tree pullets?

"And there's more than the South involved in this thing, George, you better believe. What do you reckon the real, honest Northern married gents, like yourself, think about that spiel of Mister Tillman's? I suppose there ain't no descent bandelets in Wisconsin or Illinois?"

"I ain't so sure about Illinois," said the Head Barber. "Remember the married men in Illinois is pretty close to Chicago."

POOR BEAST

This is said to be the latest song hit in Atchison. "No Matter How Hungry a Horse Becomes, It Can Not Eat a Bit."
—Kansas City Journal.

Some people call the devil a good fellow.

"Same time his woman was a-lyin' down becon rinds an' the chilun—what few there was left—could have suthin' to sen-sum their corn pone with.

"Bisco's family certinly was a hungry-lookin' lot, an' they had good reason to look hungry, an' most of the time on the children was a-lyin', an' that made it hard for po' Bisco, too, for he hated to see any kind o' sufferin', an' that was why he scrimpy kep away from home.

"Well, finally Bisco went to town an' sold a couple o' shoats, an' he got so blamed full that he fell off the sidewalk an' broke his neck before he'd spent half o' the money he'd got for 'em. O' course, they took him home an' had a coffin made for him, an' all them things. They had to.

"There hain't no use a-sayin' nobody, alive or dead, as ever I've found," observed the storekeeper.

"What did he say, Wash?" asked Sol Baker, eagerly.

"This is what he said," replied Hancock. "'Brethern,' he says, 'there hain't no call for me to round the departed. It's unnecessary. I hain't a-goin' to dwell on his faults. You-all are his neighbors an' you know 'em. You known what the good book says 'tis jestice of the law is a-goin' to be, you know what kine o' commendations is provided for drunkards, accordin' to the Word. You know what a mother an' a wife-beater can do. A dead-beat has got to expect. But there's one thing I've been told that I'm sot to favor of our brother deceased, an' that is that he hears now in the right place.

"'Brethern,' says ol' Bark, 'his heart was in the right place. It's in the left side of his chile', right alongside of his lungs. If it was any consolation to the deceased, I can say that there was no displacement of the deceased's liver. He had five fingers on each hand an' would have had six on each side of his hand if he hadn't been cut off in a drunken brawl with that other limb o' Satan, Clem Pickell. Let us be thankful then, my brethern, for these good qualities and refer to them rather than to the human weaknesses which, more or less, we all share.'

"Well, I hain't that what I said!" demanded the storekeeper.

Advice to the Lovelorn

MIGHT TRY IT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty years of age and am desperately in love with a beautiful young lady of eighteen. We have been friends for the last three years, and are very fond of each other. A year ago she lost her mother, and has filled a position since. I can't now see her living by herself, and desire to make a home for her. I am drawing $15 per week, and she is a salary of $18 a week, and she is drawing $8 per week. Do you think it would be policy for both of us to still hold our positions, or for her to give up her position, if we get married?

W. J. B.

YOU might both keep your positions for a while, and then, if you saw that she could not manage the housekeeping and attend to her work, she could give up the work. If you manage well, you alone are making enough to support both of you.

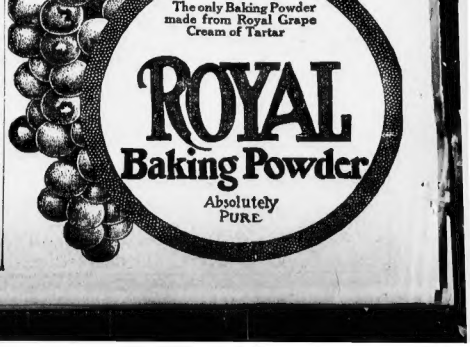
TIME MAY HELP.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am engaged to a young man whom I do not love. He is a fine fellow in many respects, and his promises me a good home and lots of presents and all sorts of things, but I do love a young man whom I used to go with before I met this one. Now, my people are against him very much and don't let me go with him. As I am going to move with him and don't know what to do, I ask you for your kindly advice, for I am broken hearted.

ANXIOUS.

YOU must not marry a man you do not love, even to please your family. If the man you do love is worthy, I think you will be able to persuade your people that he is so, and that you cannot be happy with any other man. Be patient and it may all work out well.



Vincent Girls Score Hits in Charity Show

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

For two hours Boston society revelled in the atmosphere of the Turkish Harem—to be sure it was admitted at the end that it was only a Harem-Scarem, but, nevertheless the scenery, the costumes, the music, everything, in fact, gave the impression life in the true Turkish Harem.

It was the annual Vincent Club show and the best ever. It was for charity—the Vincent Hospital—that our fairest and most aristocratic maidens donned paint, powder, patches and the grotesque or picturesque costumes of the Turks, the Greeks and the Armenians and for hours made strenuous efforts to amuse their critical audience. They certainly did.

"Haram-Scarum" is a musical comedy in two acts, the lyrics by Miss Frances Porter, a bud of two Winters ago, and the music by her talented and accomplished sister, Elizabeth. It's highly amusing and interesting from beginning to end and was carried off with a dash and a finish that would do credit to professionals. The feature dances, the choruses, the drill—they were all splendid, and the audience at times was even roused to cheers.

The first great burst of applause was for the "leading man," Miss Pauline Joyce, who, in a trig suit of blue and panama hat, gave in song and pantomime some of her or rather "his" experience while traveling through Turkey. As a man she certainly made a hit.

But if a comedy be true to its name, Miss Clemence Crafts, the talent girl in society, by a large part of the audience would have been chosen the star. She was arrayed in the linen garb of a man tourist, with pinkish red wig and whiskers.

Miss Frances Porter, who wrote the lyrics for the comedy, was another amusing little actress, wonderfully clever in her part—that of a waiter in the Harem Cafe. Her spotless white apron, her well-curled black mustache and her air of solicitude when serving the empty glasses and of gratitude when receiving the fake tips, combined to make her one of the most thoroughly enjoyable young persons on the well-filled stage.

As Abdul Mahomed, Sultan of Turkey, petite and winsome Molly Adams, in beard, turban, Turkish slippers, yellow pajamas, striped blue and white coat and diamonds galore was unrecognizable.

Miss Lolla Tuckerman was the forbidding Turkish guard. Miss Barbara Burr, Miss Susan Grinell, Miss Margaret Stackpole and Miss Leslie Lindsey, the American girls and Miss Anna Mills, Miss Elizabeth Denny, Miss Nora Thayer and Miss Nancy Graves, the American men.

Miss Olga Lingard as John Hart, American Consul, was a decidedly boyish and amusing diplomat in her becoming attire of white flannels and Panama hat.

Rollo's song, "I Said Politely," made a decided hit. The chorus sang "Biff! Bang! A Mile a Minute," with excellent spirit; "When I Am Out in Turkey," was sung by the American consul and chorus and the "Automobile Song," brought down the house. "It's always the bubbles that cause the trouble," being the refrain, and incidental "knocks" to the club members who are motorists being most generous, Miss Dorothy Forbes and her recent one cent fine fund, twing one of them.

"Here He Comes," by the octette, and "I Met Her at the Metropole," by Hollo and the Cafe Girl (Miss Lillian Cotton) and chorus including Miss Katherine Dorr, Miss Marion Lawson, Miss Dorothy Lawson, Mrs. Richard Theradike, Mrs. John S. Lawrence and Miss Helen Thomas, being exceptionally clever.

The Irish breakdown, danced by the American consul's servants in costumes of green and white and to the Irish airs set to breakdown words, was one of the best features on the program. Those in the dance were Miss Pauline Hurd, Miss Suzette Davis, Miss Dorothy Bolles, Miss Dorothy Coburn, Miss Molly Dill and Miss Ruth Flint.

The Dervishe dance was done by Miss Dorothy Coburn, Miss Natten Inches and Mrs. William Wood.

Miss Jean Bird in the Yanade dance showed endurance as well as grace. Again and again she went through the intricate movements of the Orient and always smiling as the lights, delicate green or rich crimson, enveloped her swaying figure.

Other dances were "The Reprieve of the Prisoner," by Miss Harriet Jacques and Miss Dorothy Dexter; the "Bashi-Bazuks," by the Misses Eleanor Colton, Mary J. Amory, Alice DeFerdi, Margaret Thomas, Nina Burnham, Cornelia Wolcott, Mildred Allen, Alice Bowler, Grayce Stackpole, Evelyn Thayer, Dorothy Mandell and Charlotte Allen; the Persian dance, by Miss Vryiena Gill, Miss Marion Lawson, Miss Dorothy Lawton and Mrs. Richard Theradike; "The Bells," by Miss Jessie Sherman, and the Russian dance by Miss Elizabeth Jones and Mrs. William Minot.

In the chorus were:

Turkish ladies—Miss Ruth Nickerson, manager; Miss Ella Lyman, Miss Charlotte Harding, Miss Elizabeth Nash, Miss Isabella Clark, Miss Anne Bigelow, Miss Hildegarde Allen and Miss Helen Read.

Turkish men—Miss Charlotte Allen, manager; Miss May Loring, Miss Alice Poland, Miss Mary Pierce, Miss Alice Dorr, Miss Marjorie Phelps, Miss Molly Tufts and Miss Leslie Bradley.

Greek ladies—Miss Julia Coolidge, manager; Miss Ruth Flint, Miss Mildred Cox, Miss Anna Gardiner and Miss Suzette Davis.

Greek men—Miss Rosamond Rowditch, manager; Miss Catherine Foster, Miss Pauline Doyle, Miss Ellen Farnsworth and Miss Charlotte Hemenway.

Arabian ladies—Miss Rosamond Bradley, manager; Miss Anita Clark, Miss Elizabeth Jackson, Miss Marion Gay and Miss Louise Brooks.

Arabian men—Miss Madeleine Dixon, manager; Miss Della Dana, Miss Mildred Thayer, Miss Katherine Andrews and Miss May Murray Kay.

French ladies—Miss Vryiena Gill, manager; Miss Marion Lawson and Miss Dorothy Lawton.

Shopkeepers—Miss Marjorie Thayer and Miss Josephine Griffith.

THE WONDER GIRL GOES SKETCHING

Woman's Taste in Dress—Do Men Like It?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Whereas in silks my Julia goes
Then, then methinks how sweetly flows
The liquefaction of her clothes!
Next, when I cast mine eyes and see
That brave vibration each way free—
Oh, how that glittering taketh me!
—HERRICK.

"WOMEN do not dress to please men, but to please themselves," said a man to me the other day. He was my brother, and he had just deigned to admire the suit I was wearing.

I had received the compliment with proper elderly gratitude and humility, and a discussion on woman's dress had arisen.

"I like the hat you have on to-day," he said indelicately, "but some of your hats are horrors."

The hats in question are really very modest affairs considering the season's styles, but it shows the view that men take of our present head-gear.

Style Wins Against Man's Praise

It is a strange fact that though woman thoroughly appreciates a compliment from man upon her clothes, she rarely dresses to please him.

In the struggle between style and man's admiration, style wins every time.

When a woman wearing a new gown for the first time enters a room full of men and women, she does not think of what the men will say, but of what the women will say.

She wants the men to admire her, but the women to admire her gown.

Fundamentally, of course, it is the men's admiration which she values most highly.

Men have not taken very kindly to the present Empire style.

"Why can't woman keep her waist line where it belongs?" one man grumbled.

The severely plain tailor-made costume invariably finds favor, but you can't wear a street suit to a dinner or a dance.

Have you ever worn a new gown for some special man's benefit and then found him sublimely unconscious that you were not wearing the same gown you had worn for Monday? It's discouraging, isn't it?

I know of one woman who consulted her husband's taste in the matter as to about to buy a new gown, and his answer was: "Oh, my dear, get any nice, quiet color like gray."

His mother had always worn black silk, and he labored under the impression that silk was a color.

Now and Then a Man's an Angel.

Some men are perfect angels about their wives' clothing. They notice every new thing, and take as much interest as though they were choosing a set of new shirts for themselves.

The most unsatisfactory man of all regarding clothes is the husband who expects his wife to dress in the height of fashion, and then grumbles when the bills come in.

I don't feel badly when your husband or sweetheart criticizes your new hat, for men rarely do like any woman's hat. They think women look better without them.

But they would not admire us when we caught rolls in our heads and wear about with curl papers, merely as a matter of fact I think we most continue to wear our peach basket hats.

And as for our dresses—we will just go on as we are, dressing to please ourselves, but humbly grateful for the occasional compliments we fall from the lips of our lords and masters.

THE JOURNAL OF A NEGLECTED WIFE

SYNOPSIS.

The wife in the story, after tortures of suspicion, has come to certainty that some other woman has won her husband's love. She has detected perfume on his coat sleeve and shoulder. She has found an incriminating note to her husband in a woman's hand writing. She has found a new photograph of Horace, her husband, of which he had told her nothing, and which he weakly explains that he had taken for the Lawyers' Association. She has resorted to every artifice to preserve her beauty and youthfulness. She has been torn for months by agonies of doubt as to whether she will be able to screen his love for her, or whether the unknown rival she hates will lure him farther and farther from her.

Unable longer to endure suffering in silence and inaction, she decides to follow her husband and find out who "she" is, and secure a strong counsel hat and heavy veil as a disguise.

Shadowing her husband from the time he leaves his office, she hears him phone his own house that he is "detained by business"; then phone the "other woman" that he will be "right on"; she follows him to a subway train, and when he leaves the train follows until she sees him enter a handsome apartment building.

The wife is visited by a woman friend who has lost her husband by death, and though the husband had been coarse, often brutal and dissipated, and even faithless to his marriage vow, he had never let her feel any difference in his love toward her, and she mourns him and cannot be comforted. The heroine of the story feels that her friend's husband is truer to her, even in death, than her own husband is to her, though they live under the same roof and eat at the same table.

Horace is in the habit of always sitting alone, the telephone bell rings, but when she picks up the receiver she can hear only the sigh that it was the other woman who called up, in the hope that Horace would answer the telephone. Hearing the sigh, she did not answer.

August 10th.

THIS morning I know from his eyes that he, too, has not slept.

I felt that he would repeat it, that it would make a mistake if I made any reference to the play, and yet the hope that he would say something to help me, to make me feel that he had not wished to convey by his silence what I had thought last night, drove me to try to force from him some expression.

"Do you think such things and that way in life?" I tried to say it casually.

"How do you mean?" quietly.

"The parting in the last act. If a man really loves another woman, do they often prolong her for the sake of their love? I did not look up; I kept my eyes on a crust I was crumbling on the tablecloth.

"Would he have ever allowed himself to love another woman?"

"No; I presume not."

I waited, but he said nothing more. In a few moments he glanced at his watch and left for the office.

My effort had been futile—his voice and manner had betrayed nothing.

August 11th.

AM I too self-centred? Do I give way to my grief too much? Would another woman under the same circumstances have more strength?

I know how dangerous is this constant brooding. I know that I am losing all sense of proportion. His slightest word and action I now bring to bear always upon one thing.

I know that I draw suspicions from perfectly innocent causes. My mind is so colored that I am able to see nothing else.

And yet how can I help it?

I have tried to fight against it, to force an interest in other things, to drive my mind to things outside myself. And yet always the background of my thoughts remains the same.

Never for a moment am I wholly free from the consciousness that my husband is drifting away from me—that he loves another woman. That poisonous thought is always with me.

August 12th.

MORE and more I have come to take a morbid, feverish interest in newspaper accounts of divorce scandals and intrigues.

Such things have always repulsed me; until lately, I would not ever read the headlines. But now—now I read all the details with a consuming interest. I will even read the varying accounts of the same case in the different papers. It all fills me with loathing, and yet it has this fearful hold upon me.

These things that I have always regarded with such horror are now touching so closely my own life. Not the vulgar publicity, of course; that I feel will never come. But the underlying cause is always the same—the love of a man for a woman who is not his wife. It terrifies me when I think that everything in life now seems bearing on that—novels, plays—they are all built on variations of that theme.

August 13th.

I WAS in a book store to-day buying some stationery, when I saw one of the many reprints of a pen-and-ink sketch that have been much displayed in the shops. I have always thought it gruesome, and passed it with a shudder. But to-day I bought one. I don't know why.

From a distance it is the outline of a skull; nearer, one sees it is cleverly formed by a beautiful woman sitting before a dressing table, the bottles and trinkets before her forming the teeth and the drapery over the dresser the top of the skull.

I have it now on my desk.

There is a sort of fierce pleasure in thinking that the woman Horace loves will one day be a hideous, grinning skeleton. All his love and devotion cannot save her from that.

The skeleton is there now—the ugly, gaunt bones—if he could only see through the soft, fair flesh that covers them.

August 14th.

ONCE or twice a year Ellen sends a box of clothing to her mother, who, with a large family of children, lives in Georgia. They are very poor and can make use of anything that is sent.

I always collect a lot of my own and Horace's clothes, and it was for this purpose that I went through some trunks in the storeroom to-day.

In one of the trays I came across a pale blue chiffon evening gown, one of the gowns I had myself made for my trousseau. I had worn it but a few times, for I always felt the neck was cut too low. And now, except that the lace had grown yellow, it was still fresh.

How beautifully it was made, with what care I had finished each small seam.

And what hopes and dreams I had sewn into it.

And now those tiny stitches, fine and frail as they were, had outlived my happiness! Oh, if I could only go back—if I could only go back!

For a long time I held the gown in my lap, brooding over it, filled with the memories it brought.

How strange to have it there before me, every stitch I had put into it [illegible] so permanent, while all that it was made for is dead!

In the lace of the sleeve was a long, jagged tear. Oh, how vividly I remembered that. It had been torn on Horace's cuff-button during our bridal trip.

I was standing before the dressing table arranging my hair, when suddenly he came up behind me and caught me in his arms, bent back my head against his shoulder, and with his lips against my hair, murmured: "My darling—my beautiful darling! You belong to me now. You can never go back and be just yourself again, for now you belong to me—do you know that, dear?"

My only answer was to press my face closer against his breast, and so he held me silently.

When at length he released me there was a sound of tearing lace. "Oh, Mary! I'm so sorry!" as he stooped to unfasten it from his cuff-button.

"You needn't be," I laughed happily. "As if it mattered—as if anything mattered but you!"

Oh, Horace, Horace, you have torn my heart as you tore this lace; neither will ever be the same again.

You said then I could never go back and be just myself. I would now if I could, for I know you no longer need me. But I cannot—I cannot! You made me part of yourself—you taught me to want you—to need you.

And now—now you love someone else. And I am alone with only my memories.

To Be Continued.

$10,000,000 for Beans

Boston, the home of good living, annually spends ten million dollars for beans. For this is Nature's choicest food, and cheap.

Beans are 23% nitrogenous—84% nutriment. They exceed meat in food value—exceed eggs and cheese—yet they cost but a fraction as much.

They are delicious and hearty; all people like them. And no food sustains, to an equal extent, the work of brain and muscle.

Beans form the ideal food for strength and growth—for the epicure and the economical.

That is why we have worked, for 48 years, to perfect this premier dish.

We invite you to share—as millions are doing—in the benefit of what we have done.

Don't cling to home baking. Don't let the lack of needed facilities spoil this important dish.

Don't waste time and labor and fuel to do, in the wrong way, what we can do better.

It is not merely a question of knowledge or skill. One must have costly facilities to rightly bake beans.

In the first place, the oven. Beans baked in dry heat are not a digestible dish.

You can't apply enough dry heat to break up the particles, so the digestive juices can get to them.

You crisp the top beans, but the beans farther down never get half enough heat.

That is why home-baked beans are heavy; why they ferment and form gas. And that is why you serve them, probably, not more than once a week.

We bake in live steam, superheated to 265 degrees. We bake in small parcels, so that full heat goes through.

The result is, our beans digest. They don't ferment and form gas. You get the whole of their food value.

Here is another inviting result:

In steam baking, none of the beans are crisped, and none of the skins are broken.

We bake the beans until they are mealy, yet they are nutty because they are whole. Compare them with beans that are mushy and broken, as they come out from a home oven.

Then we bake the beans, the tomato sauce and the pork all together and get a delicious blend.

Van Camp's BAKED WITH TOMATO SAUCE
PORK AND BEANS

Think of the trouble saved, the time and the fuel. Think how convenient to have meals ready-cooked, better than you can prepare them.

Millions of housewives who used to bake beans are now buying Van Camp's.

They started by buying a single can, just as we ask you. Then their people asked to have more of them, just as your people will.

Now they keep a dozen cans in the house—a dozen meals ready for instant serving. They don't have bean-baking days.

It was hard for us to get them to change from home baking. But it would be utterly impossible to get them now to change back.

Please do as they did. See if your people like beans nutty and mealy, with tomato sauce baked in. See if they want beans digestible. If they do, think what you save in time and trouble. And think what you save on your meat bills.

Telephone your grocer now.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

STOCKS UP IN WALL STREET

LOCAL STOCK TONE FIRMER

By T. C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Wall Street showed its appreciation of the good quarterly statement of earnings issued by the United States Steel Corporation with a strong and active stock market to-day.

Naturally, the shares of the trust were at the head of the advancing column, with Union Pacific, Reading and other standard railroad issues sharing in the strength. During the early trading advances of from one to two points were recorded. Another factor that inspired strength was announcement by Jones & Laughlin, the largest independent steel company in the United States, that they had advanced the prices of plates and bars.

Wabash preferred was active and strong. Rock Island shares and Baltimore & Ohio showed advances. Traction shares were higher, although not very active.

In London American shares were firm with decided improvement in Union Pacific.

In the Curb market trading was dull, but prices were steady. Shares of copper companies that can produce metal under 10 cents a pound were in demand, as were the Standard silver issues.

STATE STREET.—Stocks displayed a better tone this afternoon. North Butte was the feature, but on the up side this time. The opening price was 59 and the price touched 60, which represents a recovery of 7½ points from the low of yesterday. Criticism is met with on every hand that the management does not come out with some sort of an explanation as to actual conditions.

Copper Range was steady at 75¾, to the disappointment of a few bears. Osceola was the feature, but on the up side this time. Massachusetts mining stocks were more favorable news from the property by touching 109¼. East Butte was bought by commission houses, advancing it from 13⅝ to 14⅜. Osceola dipped to 122¾, but rose sharply to 126. Amalgamated stiffened fractionally to 76½.

The favorable report of the Steel Corporation for the March quarter accounts for the late strength of iron stocks. As a matter of fact it was better than even the most sanguine had hoped for.

Business on the local curb was quiet with few and slight price changes. South-western Developments opened at 29 and eased to 27 cents.

BABY ELAND DIES IN ZOO.

WALL ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

WALL STREET, New York, April 28.—The strong undertone that has prevailed in the stock market the last few days in the face of heavy realizing by traders was explained when Steel Trust earnings for the first quarter of this year were made public. They showed net earnings of $22,921,208. The street would have been pleased had they been $21,000,000, and the figures were a complete surprise. The figures also show a steady improvement in business from January. The unfilled orders were 3,942,593 tons on March 31, compared with 3,765,343 on January 1, but many dead orders were on the books at the beginning of this year, and all now recorded there are for real business.

$ $ $

Business has been improving so much that the Steel Corporation has announced an advance in price of shapes, bars and plates. This is the first sign of recovery since the cutting of prices some weeks ago.

$ $ $

Insiders of the Steel Trust have been buying its shares for about three weeks with great confidence, and this action on their part has puzzled the general public. The impression in connection with reports of business from all parts of the country is a very cheerful picture for Wall Street's contemplation. The only doubt that arises is whether the bosses will end it all by saying it is all too good to last for speculation now that business is really beginning to grow. Safety in this direction lies in the fact that the people want no doling out of speculation are also in control of the banks, and in making it the limit in connection with it will help the Lee brothers of the rich who are marching proudly in the labor army.

$ $ $

Cheerful news came from Turkey to the effect that a decision has been reached in the war for the throne. One more week of peace has left the gold reserves of the Bank of France untouched. Harriman will get that gold yet. He needs it in his business, if property current in Wall Street can be credited. It is a cheap explanation of mysterious buying of stocks to say that Harriman and the Standard Oil are taking them, but that ancient explanation seems really to fit the present case. Counsel for the Pennsylvania people say they have no stocks of consequence, and that the Lehigh Valley, Southern Pacific and Central are scares. It will not be safe to ignore the New York Central-Union Pacific combination yarns, however much it may be to give exact dates and capitalization.

$ $ $

Brooklyn Rapid Transit and a distinguished politician of Brooklyn received a severe shock when the State Senate passed the law for a five-cent fare on Coney Island. Insiders are not worrying about the law, because it was their intention, so they say, in view of the two-cent fight, to charge a five-cent fare voluntarily. The only objection they ever had to a five-cent fare was that owing to the sparsely settled condition of territory between Brooklyn proper and Coney Island, cars ran empty one way. The last two years the growth of population has been such as to furnish passengers all along the line and make a five-cent fare profitable. But there is no certainty even yet that the five-cent law will ever go into effect, for Governor Hughes has to express his opinion on it.

Business men who make miscellaneous articles through travelling salesmen say that their drummers now in the field are sending in very large orders. This is true especially in the Far West, the business increasing in proportion to the distance from New York. Western merchants say they have permitted their stocks to run low and now find the retail demand growing very active. As their shelves are unfurnished they are compelled to buy heavily, in many lines of trade transactions of the past week have exceeded those of a month ago.

'Riverton' on Charles To Be a Model Town

Beachwood Avenue, one of the new streets being constructed at "Riverton" by the O'Connell Real Estate Company.

Following the big demand that has resulted from its announcement of the development of "Riverton," a large and handsomely located tract of land at Waltham, overlooking the Charles River, the O'Connell Real Estate Company of this city has started on the real work of improving the property and now has a large corps of workmen grading the land and putting in new streets.

Messrs. O'Connell are soaring no expense in enhancing the already handsome home sites and their expert Riverton will be one of the finest suburban sections about Boston when completed.

The property is located between the Charles River Boulevard, Arsenal and North Beacon streets, and has been subdivided into home sites ranging in size from 5,000 to 10,000 square feet. These will be sold by the company on an easy payment plan and the improvements that are now being made in the property will not cost a penny to those who locate there.

A number of new streets are being constructed and these will be built in a thorough, up-to-date manner, macadamized, and with granolithic sidewalks and grass plots bordering on the sides. These streets will be graded, as will the surrounding lots. The construction work is being done from plans drawn by the company's engineers and approved by Waterlown's officials.

WASHINGTON ST. PROPERTY TRANSFERRED

Sales of real estate in the city proper were very active to-day and a large number of important transactions were reported.

The quarter interest held by Mrs. Julia G. Boyden and Miss Alice P. Leland in the valuable property at Nos. 416 and 412 Washington street, near Summer street, has been purchased by H. Staples Potter, which now makes him the sole owner of the estate. The estate consists of a 4-story brick and granite building and 1,008 square feet of land. In connection with the sale is an interesting feature in view of the recent increase in property values in Boston.

On October 1, 1821, Mrs. Leland's grandfather of the present owner of the property bought the estate for $7,271.65, and it has remained in the family since that time. The assessed valuation of the estate is now $170,000, of which $108,900 is on the land.

The interest held by the Masonic and Fine Arts Building Co. in the property of Washington School streets has been sold by the latter company, subject to the rights of a first transfer of any interest in this valuable property, which is assessed for a total of $742,000, $475,000 being on the land and a number of other owners. The land is taxed on a valuation of $720,200.

The three-story brick building and 1,070 square feet of land at No. 195 Cambridge street, West End, assessed for a total of $8,700, has been sold by Rebecca Gold-man to Sarah Gross. The land is rated for $5,200.

The three and one-half story brick house and 640 square feet of land at No. 39 Grove street, between Phillips and Revere streets, West End, have been sold by the Elijah B. Hine estate to Frederick Kern. The property is assessed for $4,100, of which $2,100 is on the land.

In East Boston, Annie B. Goodwin et al. have sold to Ida Hirshberg, three frame houses and 3,750 square feet of land on Shelby street, near Bremen street. The whole property is taxed on a valuation of $7,500, of which $900 is on the land.

Ida Hirshberg has sold one of the three properties mentioned above to Mary E. Sullivan, and a second one to Martha Good, Each is assessed for $2,500, of which $300 is on the land.

Charlestown and Dorchester.

Arthur W. Dolan, register of probate, has purchased from Frederick J. Campbell the frame house and 1,111 square feet of land at No. 47 Lawrence street, corner of Johnson avenue, Charlestown. It is assessed for a total of $2,000, of which $1,200 is on the land. He has also purchased from Anne E. Reynolds the adjoining property at No. 45 Lawrence street, consisting of a frame house and stable and 1,100 square feet of land, all assessed for $1,800, of which $900 is on the land.

In Dorchester 12 lots of land, containing 39,171 square feet, assessed for $8,100, at the corner of Quincy and Trenton streets, have been sold by James S. Cunningham to Reuben B. Wyman.

In the same suburb the frame house and 12,000 square feet of land at Nos. 53-55 Rinsdale street, near Bernard street, have been sold by Esther L. Tibbs to Hector the Police. The estate is taxed on a total valuation of $7,000, of which $3,000 is on the land.

William Donaldson has sold to Mabel D. Godfrey a frame house and 4,850 square feet of land on Melville street, between Bradshaw street and Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester. The property is assessed for $3,000, of which $1,000 is on the land.

[illegible] Porter Dawes has sold the frame house and 5,313 square feet of land at No. 9 Thane street, between West End and Athelwold streets, Dorchester. The estate is taxed on a total valuation of $5,500, of which $1,300 is on the land.

The three-story brick house and 1,500 square feet of land on Melville street, between Bradshaw street and Blue Hill avenue, Dorchester, the property is assessed for $3,000, of which $1,000 is on the land. Ellen Crowley, the former owner, has purchased from Mary E. Griffey the frame house and 3606 square feet of land, all taxed for $4,500, at Nos. 56-58 Edith street, near Norfolk street, Dorchester. The land is assessed for $80.

A lot of land, containing about 2,800 square feet, assessed for 40 cents a foot, on Monitor street, near Washington street, Dorchester, has been sold by Agnes C. Uram to Harry W. Kimball.

GOVERNMENT BY THE PEOPLE

To Preserve a Government by the Consent of the Governed, the Boston American Advocates:

FIRST, direct nominations, that the people may select such public servants as they deem worthy;

SECOND, the recall, that the people may dismiss such public servants as have proved unworthy;

THIRD, the initiative, that the people may compel action upon such legislation as they deem necessary;

FOURTH, the referendum, that the people may accept or reject legislation as they deem desirable;

FIFTH, a Corrupt Practice act that will limit election expenses to legitimate purposes and make men, and not money, the deciding force in American politics;

SIXTH, public ownership of public utilities, that the values created by the people shall belong to the people, and a referendum upon every public franchise, that no public servant shall barter the people's property for his private gain;

SEVENTH, the election of Senators by the people, and of Judges for short terms, that no branch of government shall feel itself too far above the people or too long removed from the people.

One Half the World Misunderstands the Other Half

And Therein Lies the Cause of Half Our Troubles

Do you realize the amount of time, energy and intelligence wasted in criticism?

It would be almost impossible to issue a comic newspaper without pictures of women belittling each other in gossip. You couldn't report any average conversation among men, business men, professional men, or laboring men, without finding half the time taken up by each class of men in criticism of some other class, by each individual in criticism of some individual within his own class.

Big men and little men all waste time, energy, and simultaneously diminish human decency, by belittling each other.

How much better it would be if men would use their energy searching out and digging out the good that is in others!

Suppose a farmer spent his time saying "This land is good for nothing," or "That field will never amount to anything."

Or suppose that the miner should spend his time saying "There's no gold in that hill," or "There's no coal to be found around here."

Suppose half of the farmers and half of the miners spent their time talking in that fashion, what would become of farming and mining?

Big men and little men are alike guilty of the foolish vice of aimless criticism.

A great genius like Carlyle was weak enough to point out Huxley, the wonderful scientist, and describe him as a fool.

Ingeniously worded criticism, but trivial and inaccurate. For a comet is not, so far as we know, made up of "phosphorescent nothing." It may supply the very force, the life that feeds the solar systems, and it does not "wag its tail against the steadfast stars," for a comet's tail doesn't wag, and the stars are not steadfast—every one of them moves with incredible speed, and every one of them dies and vanishes in turn.

The greatest sun in the heavens is no more steadfast than the yellow daisy sprouting out in the field this Spring—it only lasts a little longer.

We are all of us vanishing, temporary apparitions. We come here mysteriously, and work a little while, millions and millions of us gradually improving this earth. And we melt like flakes of snow, and after a little while this planet of ours will also melt, and so will the big sun that warms us, and so will that brightly lighted cosmic street that we call the Milky Way.

Wouldn't it be more profitable, sane and decent to use up in friendly encouragement the time that we waste in bitter criticism? The big monkeys that gather in herds, the baboons and the macaques, spend all of their time chattering, barking, criticising each other.

And when a man begins to criticise he can feel himself drawing down the skin on his forehead, the way a monkey does when he criticises another monkey.

When a man speaks with savage bitterness of a rival, he can feel himself lifting up the lip on the right side, just where the lip covers the big canine tooth. That's what a wolf does when he gets ready to bite—he lifts up his lip and uncovers the tooth so that he can bite without hurting the lip.

The next time you start criticising another man, be observant, and you will find the skin of your forehead drawing down like the hairy forehead of a ringtail rhesus, or you will feel that upper lip rise in a snarl.

On the other hand, when you speak kindly of a man, when you try to find and you praise the good that is in him, you bring out the good that is in yourself; you encourage the man—for good words travel a long distance—and you make yourself a better man at the same time.

Just try an experiment now. Think of somebody whom you do not like and say, "I hate that man; he is a villain."

As you say these words you have an animal feeling in your brain, and you know that you must have an animal look in your face.

On the other hand, if you say to yourself of the same man, "Poor fellow, he has had a harder time than I. In his place I probably should not do as well as he does. I wish that I could help him." A thought of that kind produces a very different effect in your own mind; it gives you a feeling of expansion, of decency and cheerfulness.

Let us all do our best to discourage constant, useless, destructive criticism. Let us make it a point to see the good in everybody—even in the professional critics that make a living by belittling things which they couldn't possibly do themselves.

This earth has progressed toward civilization just as fast as the average man's love for his fellow man has increased. Love of others makes heroes of war and of peace. Hatred of others breeds riots, lynchings, brutality and degradation.

There is, of course, such a thing as useful criticism. It is the criticism which is CONSTRUCTIVE. And it is not criticism in the usual sense of the word.

It takes a kind form, it mixes friendly praise with equally friendly suggestion for improvement.

Leave alone the barking, snarling criticism that we get from our forerunners, the monkeys and the wolves.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

HIDING THE WINTHROP STATUE

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It is most interesting in view of the recent public controversy anent the insult done the memory of John Winthrop in failing to name a new school in Boston after him, to note the pitiful neglect of John Winthrop's statue. On September 17, 1860, the date of the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the settlement of Boston, there was presented to the city, out of the Jonathan Phillips Fund, a bronze statue of the first Governor of Massachusetts, at a cost of $7,091.

This statue was a duplicate of one placed by the State in the Capitol at Washington. The site chosen for this statue was in the centre of Scollay square, where it might daily serve as an inspiration to the people of Boston in their struggle for civic righteousness. Its position in Scollay square was analogous to that occupied by the statue of Samuel Adams in Adams square.

In due time it became necessary to utilize Scollay square for rapid transit purposes, and the inspiring monument of Governor Winthrop must give way to advancing civilization. The statue of Winthrop was driven from pillar to post, and finally, after many journeys, received a calm and peaceful resting place behind the First Church of Boston, as the means of command to allow their beloved Winthrop to occupy an insignificant position, "Unwept, unhonored, and unsung."

ALL ELECTRICITY IS TOO HIGH

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Electricity is the nail on the head on the street lighting question. It would be amusing if it were not serious, even to consider paying more than $100 a year per street arc lamp, if anything, Mr. Storrow makes the price too high when he says it should be no more than $80. Electric arc lamps of the type used here can be installed and maintained at a reasonable profit for $65 per lamp per year, or less. It is done elsewhere. If Boston pays more than $100, it will pay more than nearly all other cities. And even paying with all other cities give the public the worst of it, since the most of the other cities pay too much.

I would like to see the rates to private consumers coupled with the street lighting question. Twelve cents per kilowatt hour is much too high for illumination, and I am amazed to learn that consumers pay as much for electricity for power as for illumination.

Electricity can be made and delivered in Boston for two cents a kilowatt, or less, cost to the producer, and allowing for all of the difficulties of the trade, such as uneven consumption at various times of day, etc., eight cents per kilowatt is sufficient for illumination, and a rate considerably lower for power would be ample to return a fair profit to the electric light company.

I would like to see the manufacturers and other large consumers take up this matter seriously and exhaustively. I think they would be astonished at the result.

The immense available water power in New England should be considered, too. The rates I have mentioned consider steam power, but water power is much cheaper.

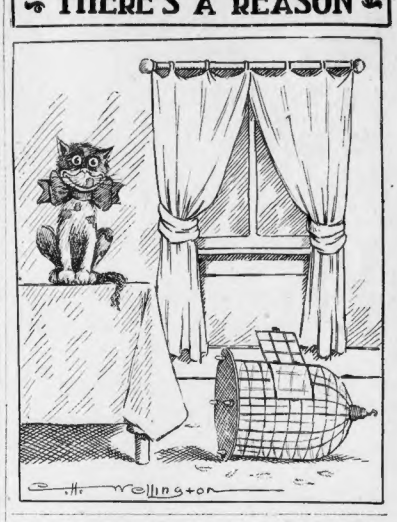
THERE'S A REASON



DR. PARKHURST'S LETTER

—ON—

"Fads as a Form of Lunacy"

—AND ON—

"A Neglected Factor in Education"

Written for the American

BY DR. C. H. PARKHURST

SANITY is a matter of degree, as is also insanity, and the two run into each other like adjacent colors in the rainbow. Every man is some one and some insane. What we call sane people are those in whom there is more sanity than insanity; and what are known as insane people are those in whom there is less sanity than insanity.

If most of us were quite lunatic, then the rational people would be the ones that would be shut up in asylums; for in all matters it is the prevailing type that gets accepted as the normal type.

And if all the members of the community were thieves and burglars except half a dozen of us, it would be that half-dozen that would be sent to Charlestown.

"Fads" is the name given to a light form of lunacy more prevalent than any other among people that in most respects are considered to be quite rational. It is a type of aberration that seems not to have been scientifically investigated.

It denotes a condition in which conclusion is reached without any intervention of reason. It is a condition in which the mind plumps itself down upon a conviction without being able to give any excuse for so doing; and it is just such convictions that are held to most tenaciously.

As reason has no part in persuading one to adopt a fad, of course reason is of no use in trying to dissuade one of his fad. It is the fact that proves that it is a matter of lunacy.

It is an ailment that prevails especially in the sphere of religion, where it receives the name of fanaticism. If we believed in demons, we should best call it demoniacal possession.

Like Dealing With An Infant or a Savage.

Argument in such a case is as useless as in dealing with an infant or a savage.

But it invades other spheres of life as well as the religious. It occurs whenever a man is unreasonably pounced upon by one idea which is allowed to exercise despotic control over him and to subjugate to itself all his energies of thought and position.

It keeps reappearing in the field of therapeutics. Awhile ago everybody was going to receive health by walking barefoot in the wet grass before sunrise. Prior to that was the blue glass craze.

A new fad that is reported to have appeared in Boston is that of the hygienic properties of music, to the effect that the ordinary hospital is to be replaced by musical conservatories.

It attacks the more impressible sex along lines of millinery, a form of obsession more commented upon because more conspicuous.

The mind is rarely conscious of its own foolish tendencies, and deserves therefore always to be treated with lenient consideration.

Such harmless touches of innocent lunacy are liable, if combated, to become a fixed infatuation, and will usually be most readily overcome by being indulgently left to take care of themselves.

The history of thought is in part a history of fads and a record of vagaries that have died, as other things die, from lack of animation.

The cheapest goods are the most expensive, and the most economical teachers in our public schools are the ones that by their superior qualifications are entitled to the highest pay.

There is no form of patriotism that counts for more in its relation to our country's future than that which devotes itself to the upbuilding of those who twenty and thirty years hence will be the men and women of the country.

The most important work ever done for a child is that which is done for him nearest the beginning of life.

The emphasis of thought and care, therefore, should rest not on such instructors as have charge of the more advanced courses of training, but upon those who are made responsible for its initial stages.

Whether in the construction of buildings, of mind or of character, the work put in at the bottom is the determinative work and asserts itself clear through to the finish.

It is due to a strange kind of thoughtlessness that principles which are adopted as a matter of course in the more common and material matters of life are not cherished with greater respect in affairs more serious and personal.

Almost any one is supposed to be fit to teach in the primary school and in the lower departments of instruction generally, and it is there consequently that the smaller salaries are paid.

Remuneration Is Graded to Dimensions of Pupils

Remuneration is graded to the age of the pupil, or, as might be said, to his dimensions in feet and inches.

Four feet of boy means, say, $500 salary for his teacher, and four feet six, $550.

Which is to say that the further he gets away from the most impressionable and determinative period of his development, the greater amount of money expended upon his training; whereas, in the instance of plants and animals, it is always the first steps in growth that are considered with the most care and with the most generous outlay of thought and means.

Some who are quite along in years realize to what extent the impulses communicated in the very earliest years of our school discipline have continued to be influential to the present hour.

The dignity accorded to teachers in the lower grades is not proportioned to the weight of responsibility devolved upon them.

The foregoing is not a complete statement of the case, but calls attention to one feature of the education problem too commonly neglected.
